NO. 21,868 Entered as Second-Class Matter, Postoffice, Washington, D. C. WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1936 * X Copyright, 1936, By The Washington Post. THREE CENTS

Cayton, West Say Income Includes Pay From Schools

Fee Splits Recited By Acting Counsel

House Slated to Insist on Salary Clause in Conference.

By James D. Secrest.

Seeking to build up a case in support of the clause in the 1937 District supply bill prohibiting District employes who earn $2,400 a year or more from doing outside work for pay, the House sub-committee on District appropriations yesterday questioned Judge Nathan Cayton, of Municipal Court, and Vernon E. West, acting corporation counsel.

Judge Cayton was summoned before the sub-committee after he refused to answer a questionnaire sent to all District judges by Representative Blanton, acting chairman of the sub-committee. He maintained that the information sought had nothing to do with the pending appropriations bill.

The questioning of Judge Cayton, conducted by Representative Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania, disclosed, according to Blanton, that, in addition to his $8,000 salary, Judge Cayton receives $800 a year from Columbus University, $500 from National University Law School and $500 from Howard University Law School.

Admits Other Income.

West voluntarily admitted that, besides getting $7,000 a year from the District, he is a paid lecturer at the National University Law School, receives a split in fees paid for bar examinations, and is now receiver in a case involving $45,000 in property.

The acting corporation counsel said he has received $930 so far this year in fees from bar examinations and anticipates a receivership fee of about 5 per cent of the $45,000 or $2,250.

The acting chairman of the sub-committee revealed that considerable data has been obtained on the outside activities of lawyers, judges and physicians on the District pay roll.

While intimating that the House conferees may agree to certain exemptions from the $2,400 restrictive clause where first-class physicians devote only a small portion of their time to District business, Blanton hinted that the House group will insist upon the limitation against the majority of District employes.

Conference Next Week.

The House managers will not be able to meet the Senate conferees before next week, he said, although conferences previously had been delayed because of the absence of Ditter, who returned to the Capital yesterday.

"Why, $7,000 and $8,000 are big salaries," the Texan said. "In my State the Supreme Court judges are paid $4,000, whereas here in the District the Municipal Court judges, who can't handle cases involving more than $1,000, get salaries of $8,000."

He insisted that judges who teach in law schools cannot give the proper amount of time and energy to both jobs.

The hearings yesterday afternoon will be printed as a supplemental transcript on the District budget.

Jersey Tree-Dweller Loses Wife by Divorce

Newark, N. J., April 29 (AP).—Mrs. Emilie Arslanian, 27, of Bloomfield, testified today that her husband preferred to live in a tent or a tree, and was granted her petition for a divorce.

Arslanian, a 52-year-old Montclair rug dealer, was not in court. Mrs. Arslanian said she thought he was living in a tree or tent near Crystal Lake, West Orange. She said he found apartment life too confining.

Flashbulb Shocks Toscanini At Farewell to Philharmonic

Conductor Flees From Stage as Ovation Resounds in Hall.

By the United Press.

New York, April 29.—Arturo Toscanini was accorded one of New York's greatest ovations tonight when he made his last appearance as director of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra.

The thunderous demonstration by a capacity crowd in Carnegie Hall was marred slightly by the explosion of a camera flash near the famous Italian conductor, which blinded him momentarily and caused him to leave the stage.

He was not injured, but was greatly upset and did not return to the stage to acknowledge the applause, which lasted for seven minutes.

The audience did not know he had been disconcerted by the flash until the following announcement was read:

"The photographer who took the maestro's picture as the program ended nearly blinded him with the flashbulb. The maestro was severely shocked. He wants you to know he loves you all and wants to thank you for everything."

The huge audience was silent for a moment. Then someone shouted: "Shame! Shame!"

speeches or flowers. These were omitted at his own request.

Mounted police cleared the path for ticket-holders outside the hall. One thousand last-minute enthusiasts sought standing room tickets, although only 150 were available.

Selling Drives Market Down; Traders Jittery

Europe Buys Gold as Hedging Move in Fear of Devaluation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 29.—Jittery stock market traders scuttled for the sidelines today, in the process kicking the props out from under many of the pivotal shares for losses of 1 to 4 points, with a few wider breaks.

The decline was conspicuous for the "blue chip" character of its leadership. American Telephone led the retreat to finish off 6 points after being down more than 7 for a time. An appreciable number of active issues scored new lows for 1936.

Liquidation was stimulated following the passage by the House of Representatives of the new Federal corporate tax bill. In early dealings the market had held its own fairly well and made spasmodic attempts to get ahead.

The foreign situation continued to play on raw speculative nerves, made jumpy by the series of wide declines which began more than a week ago. Some selling from abroad was reported, fostered by uncertainty over the forthcoming tax legislation at Washington.

Europe Influences Attitude.

The continental politico-financial situation likewise gave the market one of its queerest quirks as a handful of gold issues were actively bought at rising prices as the rest of the list slumped.

Brokerage firms with a considerable foreign clientele reported that Amsterdam and other European sources were buying the gold stocks as a hedge against possible devaluation of the franc and collapse of the gold currency bloc. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined 1.5 points at 57.3. The utilities composite of 15 issues, off 1.4 to 43.4, was at the bottom for 1936.

A late fading of demand for May wheat unsettled that leading grain for losses of ⅝ to 1¼ cents a bushel and added to the general confusion. Corn was down ½ to ¾. Cotton dipped 10 to 25 cents a bale.

Telephone Active.

The selling in American Telephone was persistent, but not sufficient to bring it into the list of the 20 most active issues of the day. Included in that group, with losses of 1 to 4 or so, however, were such prominent shares as U. S. Steel at 55¾, off 4½, General Motors off nearly 3, at 60¾, Chrysler about as much at 93⅞, Anaconda down more than 2 at 32⅛ and Bethlehem off 4½ at 46.

The upward flurry in gold shares might have been interpreted as a belief in impending changes in the gold content of the dollar. But an absence of change of importance

Rome Seizes Plane Of Negus 'Rescuer'

Rome, April 29 (AP). Rene Drouillet, French aviation adviser to Emperor Haile Selassie, today made the error of landing in Italy, thereby losing the American monoplane in which he had hoped to rescue the Ethiopian ruler from Italian troops.

Drouillet caused a sensation in French aviation circles on Saturday, when, under the eyes of detectives assigned to guard his impounded plane, he took off for an unannounced destination from the Villa Coublay Airdrome, near Versailles.

The government stated that after fleeing France, where orders have been issued for his arrest, Drouillet encountered engine trouble over Sardinia. He was compelled to change his route to Italy, landing safely at the Centocelli Airfield, near Rome.

Italian officials, aware of allegations that Drouillet was flying to the aid of Haile Selassie, impounded the plane for lack of papers. The aviator was released.

Drouillet, chagrined over the loss of his plane, ruefully explained that he had no alternative but to land at Rome after his oil fuel line broke.

White Sulphur Host to Ad Men For Convention

All Angles of Business to Be Discussed; Special Ladies' Program.

By Felix Bruner.

A Staff Correspondent.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 29.—Tycoons of America's advertising world, the men behind the words and pictures of advertisements that help move the goods of the Nation from manufacturers' shops and merchants' shelves into the hands of the consumer, began to assemble here today for the nineteenth annual convention of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Shop talk at closed sessions will predominate tomorrow, with all members and guests invited to an open meeting Friday, at which speakers will continue the discussions. The general subject of advertising will be tackled from every possible angle.

Entertainment for Wives.

Highlight of the convention will be the closing banquet Friday evening, with the former president of the Rockefeller Foundation, Dr. George Vincent, as principal speaker.

Many of the members of the A. A. A. A. are accompanied by their wives, for whom a special program of activities has been arranged. Between serious meetings, some consideration will be given by the members themselves to the general subject of golf. A three-day, match-play tournament is the feature of the recreational part of the program.

For the ladies, a luncheon will be given tomorrow at Greenbrier's golf and tennis club. Thursday afternoon a ladies' golf tournament is scheduled, with a dinner for the fair sex only in the evening, to be followed by bridge.

Among Early Arrivals.

The program of the open meeting Friday, to be attended by members, wives and especially invited guests, will include talks by advertising authorities, among them the following:

"Why Pick on Advertising?", by Raymond Rubicam, chairman of the board of A. A. A. A.

"Alone Together," by Mrs. Jean Austin, editor of American Home magazine.

Suspect Held In Kidnaping Disappears

Another Is in Custody Here, Questioned in Utterback Case.

Loudoun County's comedy kidnaping reached new heights or depths even for burlesque last night.

Yesterday's installment in the melodrama of the alleged abduction of 18-year-old Hilda Utterback, of Hamilton, Va., included:

A suspect, arrested in Washington, was turned over to four men, believed to be Loudoun County officials and deputy sheriffs. When they arrived at Leesburg, the county seat, he had mysteriously disappeared.

Did Washington police make a mistake and turn over the men to four impostors? Local officials would be heartbroken if they thought this were true.

According to Lieut. C. P. Cox, of the Metropolitan Police Department, a very honorable man, Loudoun's sheriff, E. S. Adrian, and Commonwealth's Attorney Charles Harrison, appeared at headquarters yesterday and asked the department's co-operation in the arrest of two men.

Two Arrested Here.

Lieut. Cox said that the help was furnished and two men, one a steamfitter, Hampton T. Townes, 37, married, of 2138 K street northwest, and the other an electrician, Charles H. Ball, of Clarendon, Va., were taken into custody on an investigation charge.

Then, Lieut. Cox said, Ball was removed to the Fifth Precinct and Townes agreed to return to Leesburg with the alleged representatives of the county. Adrian, Harrison, the two deputies and Townes then set out in the same car, he said.

Some two hours later a car bearing the real Adrian, Harrison and two deputies arrived at Leesburg. Townes was not with them. He had escaped, disappeared, been abducted, or had he, as they said, never been with them?

Both Uncommunicative.

Neither Adrian nor Harrison was particularly communicative when questioned by reporters on their arrival at Leesburg. They did little but say "no," to questions about the arrest of Townes, his whereabouts or where they had been for the past four hours.

Both the sheriff and the prosecutor denied visiting Washington.

The Commonwealth's attorney said he had been "fishing up Goose Creek and never got a bite." The sheriff didn't say he had been fishing.

But to get back to Townes and Ball.

Ball denied that he had ever seen Miss Utterback and said absolutely that he had no knowledge of the abduction Saturday night.

Townes also denied any connection with the case.

Roadster Seen.

Lieut. Cox said that Loudoun County officials informed him that the basis for Townes arrest was that he was known to be acquainted with the girl; that he is known to have seen her Wednesday before the kidnaping, and that a yellow roadster similar to his was seen at Leesburg on the night of the abduction.

It was deemed a possibility that if the men to whom Washington authorities turned over Townes were really the persons they described themselves to be they might have left Townes in Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax, or even Winchester. A check of these places did not locate him, hence the disappearance theory seems most logical at the moment.

Attorney Harrison's remark about "fishing in Goose Creek" was not allegorical, as there is a real Goose Creek 4 miles east of Leesburg.

The possibility that Townes might have been taken to Hamilton was scouted as residents there are behind Hilda's story of her abduction and would be resentful of such a step, it was said.

Residents of Leesburg are taking an opposite view of the alleged crime and are inclined to the opinion that things are not what they seem.

White House Parley Asked By PWA Bloc

7 in House Would Urge President to Divert Relief Funds.

Senator Barbour Seeks to Force Accounting on Hopkins Funds.

While the House beat down one Republican attack on Harry L. Hopkins and his Works Progress Administration, a bloc of House Democrats yesterday negotiated with the White House for a showdown on earmarking part of pending WPA appropriations for PWA.

The bi-partisan assault on New Deal relief activities meanwhile spread to the Senate, where Senator W. Warren Barbour (Republican), New Jersey, introduced a resolution calling on Hopkins for a financial accounting of WPA activities.

Led by Representative Alfred F. Beiter (Democrat), of New York, the House earmarking bloc, seeking $700,000,000 of the $1,500,000,000 relief bill for permanent PWA works, phoned the White House for an appointment sometime today. At a late hour last night it had not yet been arranged.

150 Names on Petition.

Representative Beiter announced that a delegation of seven House Democrats, backed by 150 signatures on a petition, would ask the President to consent to the earmarking. The group plans to call a House Democratic caucus if no satisfactory agreement can be reached.

The Barbour resolution asked for a statement of the unexpended balance of the $4,880,000,000 work relief fund allocated largely to WPA last year. Barbour sought data on sums which have not been legally allotted, and an estimate of the cost of relief planned for the next fiscal year.

Republican members of the House Appropriations Committee, now considering the $1,500,000,000 relief bill, recently made similar demands for information from Hopkins, and the Works Progress administrator submitted a large mass of data. Complaint has been made by House Republicans, however, that Hopkins did not supply a detailed breakdown of how funds were spent by States, or how the new money will be allotted by States. There is said to be $1,040,000,000 of the old $4,880,000,000 appropriation bill unobligated.

Beiter's request for an audience with the President yesterday on PWA earmarking was the second important attempt of its kind this session. The first was successful. It was led by Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and sought relief funds to continue CCC camps in full operation. The President reached a compromise with the CCC earmarking bloc shortly after a Democratic caucus had been asked on the issue.

Lost in Double Vote.

Beiter is following the same strategy, but has not yet amassed the same number of signatures on his petitions to the President. He said last night, however, that he has sufficient "commitments" in addition to the 150 signatures, to enable him to proceed. Only 25 signatures are required to force a Democratic caucus, and the New Yorker said these are available.

A crushing Democratic majority meanwhile easily tabled a resolution calling upon President Roosevelt to make public a recently widely discussed report, highly critical of WPA, made by Hugh L. Johnson, one-time NRA chief, and former New York City relief director.

The resolution, offered by Representative Clarence McLeod (Republican), Michigan, and solidly backed by Republicans, was called up by Chairman John Cochran, with a recommendation that it be tabled. By a standing vote, the House, 138 to 57, tabled it. Republicans forced a roll call vote, but again lost, by 98 to 243.

At Cochran's suggestion, a letter from Hopkins was read to the House. It stated that Johnson's report was submited after his resignation from NRA, and concerned many persons and agencies outside of WPA.

Hoax Sends Police, Fire, Hospital Units To Senator's Home

Almost simultaneously phones rang at the Police Department, the Fire Department and Emergency Hospital.

To the first a voice said "There's a shooting at 1814 Nineteenth street northwest;" to the second a voice said "There's a fire at . . ." to the third a voice said "There's a poison case at . . ."

A police radio car, fire engines and an ambulance went to the address, the home of Senator Morris D. Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas. Policemen, firemen and internes were told there was neither shooting, fire nor poison case.

Youth Admits Driving Purse-Snatcher's Car

William Henry Carey, 19, of 5 K street northeast, was charged with robbery yesterday after he is alleged to have confessed to police that he participated in more than 10 pocketbooks snatchings, the loot being valued at more than $500.

Carey was arrested several days ago by Detective Sergts. J. J. Tolson and Elmer Lewis near his home. He readily admitted driving a car that was used in the robberies. He told police the name of his associate, who is being sought. Detectives said three other youths are still being held for investigation.

Robot to Radio Weather Data From 10 Mi. Up Revealed Here

A robot weatherman that can radio to earth weather conditions 10 or more miles in the air was described yesterday before the American Meteorological Society.

The society also heard Dr. Louis H. Bean, adviser to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, say the Government is inaugurating a five-point program of research to determine if weather can be predicted two weeks in advance.

The robot weatherman is a mechanical explorer of the upper air. Attached to a small balloon, he can radio to observers on the earth data on pressure, temperature and humidity high in the stratosphere.

The device was perfected by two men, L. F. Curtiss, of the Bureau of Standards, and K. O. Lange, of Blue Hill Observatory, Harvard University, who worked independently, yet developed similar apparatus.

Lange's equipment weighs just 1¼ pounds; Curtiss' just under 2 pounds. Both designs broadcast on a wave length of 5 meters from an antenna of 5 meters of wire.

In Curtiss' machine, the signals, which ground observers can translate into terms of temperatures, pressure and humidity, are punched on a "ticker tape," while in Lange's they are recorded by a mechanical pen on scaled paper.

The advantage of these machines over airplane data-securing flights, which cost $25 a trip, were described as follows by weather experts:

They would be cheaper, observations could be made at greater heights, observations could be made in weather when flying was hazardous or impossible.

Five lines of study to be followed in the attempt to prove a basis for long-range forecasting are:

Continuous observations of the sun and its output of energy; examination of the Russian and other methods of long-range forecasting; investigation of the influence of the moon and the planets; an attempt to discover weather relationships between regions; examination of so-called weather cycles; analysis of weather and crop yields.

A host of scientists, including meteorologists, climatologists, mathematicians, astronomers, statisticians and physicists will co-operate in gathering, assembling and analyzing the determinations, Dr. Bean said.

$814,000,000 Tax Bill Passes House; C. of C. Assails U. S. Spending

2,000 Delegates Hear Day-Long Attack on Levy Program.

Leader Demands Its Abandonment

Good-Will Atmosphere Dropped; Business Objections Listed.

By Sidney Olson.

In a slashing attack on Government taxation expenditures and the unbalanced budget, speakers at yesterday's sessions of the United States Chamber of Commerce ripped into the 1935 revenue act and the proposed 1936 revenue act even as the House of Representatives was passing the levy measure by a landslide vote.

Gone was the polite atmosphere of good-will characterizing the first day of the meeting as speaker after speaker carried on the day-long onslaught on the Government's "inability to control public expenditures and obtain a balanced budget," with "no end in sight and no apparent determination by the Administration to fix a boundary;" on the "issuance by Congress of blank checks and the resulting extravagant spending by executive orders," and on the "abandonment of the Federal economy program of 1933."

These utterances, quoted from the speech of Fred H. Clausen, president of the Van Brunt Manufacturing Co., Horicon, Wis., were typical of the verbal blasts that aroused the 2,000 delegates to the chamber's twenty-fourth annual convention to repeated applause and waves of hilarious laughter.

Clausen, demanding that the Administration abandon its tax program, pare its expenditures and balance the budget to restore business confidence, insisted that this was the way to solution of the re-employment problem, one of the chief subjects on the conference agenda.

He said:

"The country is now experiencing a period of the largest expenditures, the largest revenues and the largest deficits in pease-time history.

'Horn of Plenty Open.'

"Witness the trek of Governors and mayors to the shrine in Washington imploring alms for local distribution. I do not blame them . . . for the horn of plenty is open at this end and 'it comes out here.'

"We do not want to make a political issue of government finance and taxation. The present situation has been created by the powers that be. First, we were blamed for incompetence in operating under the American economic system and thus creating the depression. Now we are asked to re-employ idle men in private industry.

"An alarming abuse of the taxing power is the expenditure of public money to create industries competing with private enterprise.

"If this kind of subterfuge tax legislation is within the United States Constitution, then State governments can tear up their constitutions, adjourn their legislatures and governors can apply to Washington for a rubber stamp as the insignia of their office.

"Where Is the End?"

"We have been open to the charge of seeking to dictate how to run the Treasury and how to let the people starve. I enter no defense except the fact of millions of wages paid for work not required . . . Passamaquoddy, Florida Ship Canal, "unsettlement schemes, dams with no market for power, created subsidized vaudeville and circus performances . . . monuments of judgment gone astray."

Briefly and bitterly Mr. Clausen summarized the 1935 tax bill, known as the "share the wealth" measure, telling his hearers that it proposed

Industry Takes 20 Billion Loss Creating Work

Plant Official Tells U. S. Chamber Wage Outlay Exceeds Warrant.

In angry rebuttal of accusations made "in certain political circles" that business has been a "ruthless exploiter of labor," William L. Sweet, treasurer of the Rumford, R. I., Chemical Works, yesterday told a United States Chamber of Commerce round-table meeting that:

"Since 1929, American corporations, wholly apart from their large contributions to community chests and their predominant share in the Nation's total tax bill, have paid out at least $20,000,000,000 to employes in providing work and wages beyond the amounts warranted by the current volume of business."

1929 Ratio Returns.

"It is not true that industrial production has virtually been restored to the 1929 level while employment still lags far behind * * * From 1930 to 1932, when manufacturing production was declining rapidly, the level of employment, relative to 1929, remained substantially above that of production.

"In 1932, when production had fallen to 53 per cent of the 1929 volume, employment was sustained at 61 per cent of the 1929 level.

"With the increases in production in each successive year since 1932, employment has advanced substantially * * * and both production and employment are now being maintained in virtually the same relation as prevailed in 1929.

"* * * Manufacturing employers during five years of depression provided * * * work and wages for an excess force averaging more than 1,000,000 employes at a cost of more than $1,000,000,000 annually.

Reply to Administration.

"In the single field of manufacturing, our industrial corporations, acting * * * without compulsion * * * have depleted their capital resources by more than $9,000,000,000 for the prime purpose of sustaining employment * * * through maintenance of surplus working forces, and through dividend disbursements."

Sweet concluded by saying:

"The employers of this country have done a good job in the depression period in using up part of surpluses to keep men at work.

"All they ask is that their efforts should not be misrepresented. Calling names or distorting facts will not put a single unemployed worker back in gainful employment."

Sweet's straight-from-the-shoul-

Washington Children Receive Too Little Milk, Study Shows

District children are getting far less milk than they should, according to results of a two-day survey announced yesterday by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer.

Conducted by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor and the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, the survey embraced 554 families, in which there were 1,730 children. It was a part of a Nation-wide survey under the bureau's direction.

Forty-four per cent of the District families either had had no milk at all the day before inquiry was made of them, or had had less than 25 per cent of the amount regarded as the minimum required for health, Dr. Hugh Davis, head of the District child hygiene service, said.

This 44 per cent contrasted sharply with 21 per cent found without sufficient milk throughout the country. In other cities is was found that 36 per cent of expectant mothers contacted had not had the minimum milk needed, while in the District the percentage was 58. For nursing mothers the figures were 27 per cent in other cities and 39 per cent in Washington.

Twenty-nine per cent of the children of pre-school age were found without milk in the District, compared with 17 per cent generally. There were 10,149 families, with 26,175 children, covered in the national survey.

Reason for the deficiency among Washington children could not be readily explained, except on the ground that many persons were not fully aware of the food value of milk and its necessity, Dr. Davis said.

"Pediatricians point out that the first six years of a child's life are crucial and there is no substitute food that can be readily given in place of milk," he said.

"That is why the lack of milk consumption in the early age groups is a serious public health problem and clearly indicates the necessity of nutrition education in the home. The District record in this respect contrasts unfavorably with the general average, which, in itself, is inadequate."

The average family studied, it was said, had an average income of $42.95 per week, but purchased only 1.74 quarts of fresh milk a day. It also bought 1.32 large cans of evaporated milk a week, and 43 of a small can. There were 4.99 persons in each family.

Democrats Vote 267 to 93 as They Override G.O.P. Opposition.

Senate's Reception Declared Uncertain

$519,000,000 Net Yield on Corporate Plan Is Claimed.

By Robert C. Albright.

Riding down compact Republican opposition, the Administration's $814,000,000 tax "reform" bill, erecting revolutionary bases of corporate taxation, yesterday swept through the House by a party vote of 267 to 93, toward an uncertain reception in the Senate.

Recent opposition trends among Senate Democrats appeared to be faltering, as the Senate Finance Committee called Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering to open public hearings today. Formerly outspoken Senate critics were reluctant to venture an opinion on the ultimate outcome.

Carrying only three amendments, all sponsored by the Ways and Means Committee, the bill passed the House within an hour after it met by almost a straight party vote. Only 11 Democrats joined with 92 Republicans in voicing a vigorous "No." Four Republicans, three Farmer-Laborites and seven Progressives voted "aye," with 253 Democrats.

Pillar of the measure is a heavy tax on corporate earnings, graduated according to the volume of dividends withheld from distribution, and a 4 per cent normal income tax on dividends in the hands of shareholders.

No Fight Started.

Conservative Senate Democrats and Republicans have expressed reluctance to repeal the tested corporation income tax, returning an assured revenue, in favor of an experimental new base. To date, however, no one of their number has shown a willingness to lead a fight on the House plan. There was growing evidence that adjournment and campaign considerations, coupled with Administration pressure for the House bill, may force acceptance of its broader principles without complete rewriting.

If the Finance Committee, after hearing testimony from a broad cross-section of business opposition, and the Treasury's defense, decides to tamper substantially with the Administration's plan, a revival of proposals of the late Senator Jones, of New Mexico, appeared most likely to succeed. This involves retention of the present corporation income tax and imposition of a surtax on top of this to induce distribution of earnings. It was poined out that the Administration might not be strongly adverse to this plan, as forced distribution of corporate earnings is the one heralded objective of the President's tax plan.

House passage of the tax bill yesterday was a perfunctory matter, largely taken for granted after members shouted down a Republican motion to recommit the measure on the previous day.

Hurt Shareholders.

Although primarily a corporate tax scheme, Treasury experts concede that the new tax ax will fall heaviest on shoreholders. They estimate that corporations actually will pay $67,000,000 less than under existing law, but that shareholders caught by the 4 per cent income tax, will pay $658,000,000 more.

From this phase of the program, the House committee claimed a net yield of $519,000,000. Adding to this $100,000,000 they believe they will get from an 80 per cent "windfall" tax on processing tax refunds; $40,000,000 from enforced liquidations; and $83,000,000 from halving the capital stock tax and repealing both this and the excess profits tax at the end of the year, they estimate the bill will produce $814,000,000. Business spokesmen, on the other hand, insist the Treasury actually will lose revenue.

In the bill as passed yesterday, Ways and Means committeemen claim they have plugged the two principal potential revenue leaks in the bill as originally drawn. The first change, made before the measure reached the floor, blocks a corporation from evading the tax by issuing stock dividends.

The second, approved as an amendment to the bill, stops the possibility of a revenue "lag" re-

The President, Landon Sweep Massachusetts

Preference Ballot Light; Roosevelt and Borah Pennsylvania Leaders.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 29.—Complete returns from a primary that drew a Presidential preference from but a small percentage of Massachusetts voters today gave Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas a heavy indorsement in the Republican "write-in" balloting.

A similarly small percentage of Democrats declared their preference for President Roosevelt.

No complete tabulation of the Roosevelt vote was available.

The President faced no serious opposition in the Democratic primary. Roosevelt-pledged candidates for delegates to the Democratic National Convention were elected in all but one district—the Tenth. The two successful Tenth District candidates were Maurice J. Tobin and James J. O'Keefe, both of Boston and both unpledged, but both believed favorable to the President.

A space was provided on the ballot for the voter to write in his preference for President. No names of probable Presidential candidates were printed and the vote was not binding upon any convention delegates.

Others Silent.

Officials of several Massachusetts Landon-for-President clubs had campaigned in the interests of the Kansas Governor, but none of the other leading Presidential possibilities—United States Senator Borah, of Idaho; Col. Frank Knox, Chicago and Manchester, N. H., publisher; former President Herbert Hoover, or United States Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan—made any active appeal for indorsement.

There was no tabulation of the total vote for delegates to the national and State conventions as compared with the total preference vote, but apparently comparatively few of the small percentage of voters who went to the polls expressed a Presidential preference.

The Republican Presidential preference vote for the entire State gave:

Borah	4,342
Hoover	7,214
Knox	1,910
Landon	76,710
Vandenberg	117

33 Delegates Chosen.

Thirty-three candidates for delegates to the Republican National Convention were chosen. All were unpledged. Democrats elected 38 national convention delegates, 36 definitely pledged to Roosevelt and the other two unpledged but believed Roosevelt-minded.

Outstanding of the district battles for delegate to the National conventions was the Republican fight in the Thirteenth District, where John Richardson, National committeeman and intimate of Herbert Hoover, was defeated.

Richardson ran fourth, with only two candidates to be elected, and George L. Barnes, grouped with him, ran third.

The Thirteenth District victors, Charles W. Hedges and George O. P. Olsson, were grouped as unpledged but favorable to Landon.

The total number of persons voting yesterday was not available, but it was a small percentage of the approximately 900,000 Democratic and 1,300,000 Republican voters registered in 1934.

The percentage of registered voters balloting in the larger communities ranged from 5 to about 30 per cent.

Landon Victory Says Rep. Martin

By the Associated Press.

Representative Martin, elected as delegate-at-large to the Republican National Convention in Tuesday's Massachusetts primary, estimated yesterday that Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, would have at least 28 of the Bay State's delegation of 33.

"Unquestionably it was a great ground swell for Landon," Martin said. "His showing obviously came from the rank and file of the people.

"I imagine he will have from 28 to 30 of the State's 83 delegates."

Martin, although an unpledged delegate at large, said he believed Landon at present appeared to be the strongest man in the Republican Party.

Roosevelt Vote Heavy in Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, April 29 (AP).—New Deal forces counted nearly 20 votes for President Roosevelt tonight for every one cast for Col. Henry E. Breckinridge in Pennsylvania's Presidential preferential promiray.

Tabulations of 4,555 out of 7,983 districts gave the President 404,767 votes and Breckinridge 23,601.

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, unopposed in the Republican preferential primary, polled 260,069 votes in the 4,307 districts reported.

There were scattered "write-in" votes for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, former President Hoover and Senator Arthur M. Vandenberg, of Michigan.

Republican organization leaders maintained they will send an uninstructed delegation to the Cleveland convention.

Viewing the Borah vote from Washington, Carl G. Bachman, chairman of the Borah-for-President committee, claimed that the Idaho Senator would have "a minimum of 20" of Pennsylvania's 75 Republican National Convention delegates.

David L. Lawrence, State Democratic chairman, declared the result "demonstrates that there is no opposition to President Roosevelt in Democratic ranks."

The figures included complete returns from Philadelphia, which gave Roosevelt 156,069, and Breckinridge, 7,922. Borah got 87,582 in the city.

In the preferential primary four years ago, Roosevelt got 133,002 to Alfred E. Smith's 101,227. Roosevelt lost the State to Hoover, 1,453,540 to 1,295,948.

Both major party organizations elected their slated delegates at large to the national conventions. Former Senator David A. Reed, insistent upon an uninstructed delegation, is among the Republican group, which also includes Senator James J. Davis, Representative William H. Wilson, of Philadelphia; Marion Margery Scranton, national committeewoman, and Judge John S. Fine, of Wilkesbarre. Henry P. Fletcher, Republican national chairman, was elected a district delegate.

Earle Included.

Congressional fights, providing virtually the only color in the primary, saw the Philadelphia Democratic organization beaten by Representative Michael J. Stack. It had backed Magistrate Thomas L. Coyle. Stack had the support of the National Union for Social Justice.

The industrial Fifth District in Philadelphia turned down Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, who made her third fight for a Republican congressional nomination. James J. Connolly was chosen to run in November against the Democrat who beat him two years ago, Frank J. G. Dorsey.

At least three of Pennsylvania's 34 members of the National House, all seeking renomination, were beaten. The official count may be necessary to decide two other contests. The three are Representatives Theodore L. Moritz, Republican, and J. Twing Brooks and William M. Berlin, Democrats.

Louis T. McFadden, who twice stopped Mrs. Pinchot in the rural Fifteenth District, then was beaten by a Democrat in 1934, failed in a comeback attempt. Col. A. G. Rutherford was the victor. McFadden twice tried to impeach President Hoover.

Boies Penrose, jr., nephew of the late United States Senator of the same name, won the Republican nomination in Philadelphia's Fourth District.

Altitude Flight Balked.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., April 29 (U.P.).—Annette Gipson abandoned her attempt for women's altitude record today when Weather Bureau officials advised conditions were not favorable for the flight. The New York flier said she may make the trial late tomorrow if conditions become suitable.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

JUST as some political commentators have Gov. Alf M. Landon stopped, with both shoulders pinned to the mat in the great wrestle for the Republican Presidential nomination, he has a disconcerting habit of suddenly bobbing up with a new exhibition of popular strength.

WALTMAN

Ever since the Republican Arrangements Committee in Cleveland selected Senator Frederick Steiwer as the convention keynoter a week ago we have read and heard a great deal of how the Republican Old Guard was stopping the Kansan. From some of these comments one would think that Gov. Landon might as well be counted out of the race.

But now there comes the result of the Republican primary in Massachusetts, in rock-ribbed, conservative old New England—and Gov. Landon runs so far ahead that the remainder of the field can hardly be seen. More amazing about that performance was the fact that Gov. Landon piled up more than 76,000 votes in a write-in movement.

When voters take the trouble—and when it is not required by law—to write in the name of a candidate, it means they feel somewhat strongly in the matter. Indeed, the Massachusetts primary gives the first indication of Republican sentiment in New England, and there can be no doubt that Gov. Landon is the outstanding favorite.

Ten voters preferred him to every one who selected former President Herbert Hoover, the runner-up. The Landon vote was approximately five times greater than the combined vote of all the other Republican aspirants.

If that result did not sound the death-knell for whatever aspirations Hoover may have to be renominated, the defeat for a place on the Massachusetts delegation to the Cleveland convention of Republican National Committeeman John Richardson, did. Richardson is an ardent friend of the former President and, if elected as a delegate, undoubtedly would have voted for Hoover, if the latter's name is presented to the convention.

Richardson was defeated by an avowed supporter of Gov. Landon. If Mr. Hoover cannot draw strength within his party in New England, his prospects of attracting support from other sections of the country are slim indeed. Having seen the handwriting on the wall, Hoover would be smart to announce that he is not a candidate for the nomination and will not permit his name to be presented to the convention. But Hoover never has done the politically astute thing.

Not only has Gov. Landon demonstrated that he is the favorite Republican candidate in an official manner in Massachusetts, but he has done the same thing through unofficial polls in virtually every section of the country. Results of the last poll on Republican candidates conducted by the Institute of Public Opinion made the Kansan the favorite in every geographical section of the country. In only one, the Mountain States, did he receive less than 50 per cent of the vote cast.

Nebraska is as different from Massachusetts as any two States could be. Yet, in a poll conducted by the Nebraska Farmer, Gov. Landon runs away with the vote in a proportion similar to the Massachusetts result. In the Nebraska poll Senator Borah finished second, with Hoover a poor third.

Gov. Landon likewise seems to be the choice of the businessmen attending the annual convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce in Washington this week, sampling polls indicated.

Whatever some of the delegates to the chamber meeting may say publicly, privately many of them have reached the conclusion that President Roosevelt will be re-elected. They do not like the President and would delight in seeing him defeated, but they confess they do not think it will happen.

Opinion in this business group seems to be that little time should be devoted to trying to defeat the President, but that, instead, a herculean effort should be made to elect Republicans to the House of Representatives in order to hold Roosevelt in check during his second four years.

Some businessmen believe that, should he be re-elected, the President will undertake to have enacted all of his pet theories, especially those subjecting business and industry to governmental restrictions and interference, and that he will be vindictive about it. The only protective barrier for business, it is argued, would be a Republican majority in the House.

For some unexplained reason the Democrats appear intent on projecting the tariff as an issue. Not only did Senate Democrats insist on including a demand for the names of tariff beneficiaries and amounts received in the Vandenberg AAA resolution, but now Senator Pat Harrison, in a statement apparently written by the Democratic publicity director, recalls all the iniquity of the Hawley-Smoot tariff act and sarcastically commends the Republicans for being converted away from protective tariffs.

But what have the Democrats, in absolute control of the Government for the last three years, done about the Hawley-Smoot act? If tariff beneficiaries have been enriching themselves recently whose fault is it?

Realtors Deny House Shortage Exists in U.S.

Spokesmen Tell Senators Slum Clearance Bill Would Be a Waste.

No housing shortage exists in the United States and "the country is getting into an overbuilt condition" instead, the Senate Labor Committee was told yesterday by real estate spokesmen from many sections.

The committteee, under the chairmanship of Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, concluded hearings on the $876,000,000 slum clearance and low-cost housing bill introduced by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York. The bill, providing for gradual slum clearance over a number of years, would advance funds to local communities as subsidies for low-cost housing.

Waverley Taylor, Washington realtor and subdivider, attended the hearing and was scheduled to testify, but when it appeared there would be no time for all witnesses to be heard, he relinquished his time. He declared the points he intended to make against the bill were brought out by other witnesses.

J. T. Nichols, Kansas City builder, told the committee that, despite assertions to contrary, "there is a normal average of vacancies and there is ample housing for everybody." He declared that the problem is not a housing shortage, but a scarcity in purchasing power, and for that reason many families cannot afford adequate housing facilities.

Urban Dwellings Vacant.

Herbert U. Nelson, Chicago secretary of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, said a recent survey showed 3 per cent of urban dwellings in 30 cities were vacant and most of them were in low rental apartments.

Nelson said he was "sympathetic" to the proposal, but that his organization believed it would not accomplish its purpose.

"We do not wish to be in the position of opposing a plan to relieve slum areas," he declared, "but we question whether this bill is the proper solution. We question the direct subsidy plan."

Walter Schmidt, Cincinnati, said there is no need for the bill and contended it would operate as a "destroyer of the urge to home ownership."

"It is people who make slum areas, not houses," he said, arguing that new houses soon would deteriorate to the condition of present dwellings in slum areas.

Constitutionality Raised.

The issue of constitutionality was raised by J. O. Pederson, of the Real Estate Association of New York City. He charged that housing is not a legitimate service of the Federal Government, and declared housing subsidies for one section of society would impose intolerable tax burdens on the "thrifty" groups.

"Rentals such as proposed in this bill would not pay 2 per cent on the investment, and no amortization at all," he said. "The entire scheme is uneconomic, and would bankrupt any city in which it operated."

"It is not a proper function of government to provide houses for the people," he said. "If it provides houses, why not provide food and clothes and all the other luxuries and necessities for them?"

He also told the committee there is not a shortage, but an excess in housing facilities.

Dr. Bartsch Seeks Absolute Divorce

Citing a voluntary separation of slightly more than five years, Dr. Paul Bartsch, curator of mollusks of the Smithsonian Institution, yesterday filed suit in the District Supreme Court for absolute divorce from Mrs. Signe E. Bartsch, to whom he has been married for 34 years.

The petition, filed by Attorneys Houston Thompson and Herbert Ward, sets forth that Dr. Bartsch is now paying his wife $180 a month and that he is willing to continue the payments.

The couple was married June 21, 1902, and have one son. Dr. Bartsch resides at 1456 Belmont street northwest, and his wife lives at 1640 W street southeast. They have been separated by a limited divorce for several years.

Winthrop Rockefeller Arms After Threats

Houston, Tex., April 29 (U.P.).—Threats of kidnaping and injury to Winthrop Rockefeller, son of John D. Rockefeller, jr., today led him to acquire a commission as deputy sheriff and carry weapons.

Young Rockefeller was back in Houston to "learn the oil business" in the fields. Two years ago, he worked here, but left when kidnaping threats were received.

A renewal of threats today sent him to the sheriff's office with his attorney, W. J. Barnes, to take the oath of office as deputy.

3-Department Inquiry Starts On Ship Safety

Roper Leads Response to Complaints Made by Striking Seamen.

By the Associated Press.

The Government instituted yesterday a three-department investigation of charges made to the Commerce Department concerning the safety of life at sea aboard American merchant ships.

Secretary Roper said that following complaints of East Coast striking seamen, he had called upon Attorney General Cummings and Secretary Morgenthau to join him in setting up a three-man board of inquiry representing the Commerce and Justice Departments and the Coast Guard.

Complaints of conditions aboard ships were given the Commerce Secretary last week at a conference with a delegation of striking seamen from New York, who were accompanied by Representative Marcantonio (Republican), New York.

Roper said that immediately upon receipt of a report from Marcantonio, he instructed Assistant Secretary J. Monroe Johnson to investigate all complaints which concerned the Commerce Department.

He said that matters concerning labor would be referred to the Labor Department and that other questions would go to the Senate Commerce Committee.

In what he said was an answer to critics, Roper cited figures he said were just issued by Lloyds of England, showing that during 1934 and up to June 14, 1935, the United States and Sweden tied for the lowest percentage of losses or condemnations of ships of over 100 tons.

Referring to nationality of seamen in the American merchant marine, Roper said records of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection showed a continual increase in the number of American seamen, rising from 55.8 per cent in the fiscal year 1928, to 80.6 per cent in 1935.

Army Aid Links Col. McMullen In Import Data

Says He Talked With Defendant Before Writing Manganese Report.

Testimony by Col. A. H. Hobley, of the "strategic war materials" section of the War Department, that he had prepared a memoradum for former Assistant Secretary of War Frederick H. Payne, suggesting that the War Department oppose an increase in import duties on manganese was offered in the District Supreme Court yesterday in the trial of Col. Joseph I. McMullen, who is charged with accepting a fee from a private corporation while he was actively engaged on official duties.

Col. Hobley, at the prodding of Assistant U. S. Attorney David A Pine, said he made his memorandum after conferring with Col. McMullen, who allegedly received $1,500 from the Cuban-American Manganese Corporation for his efforts in opposing the increase on their imports into this country.

In his report Col. Holbey asserted the views of the War Department were that importations of Cuban manganese should be encouraged because, in the event of international troubles, the United States would have a guaranteed source of supply for the highly valuable war material, which is used in armaments.

Another witness appearing before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday was William L. Armstrong, chief clerk of the Manganese Corporation, who identified the check given Col. McMullen, and John M. O'Brien, assistant cashier of the Liberty National Bank, who identified the $1,500 deposit on August 8, 1932, and also the signature of Col. McMullen on the back of the check.

Meantime, an official of the Cuban American Co. dealt a death blow to the contention of Defense Attorney William E. Leahy that the check given the Army officer was for "future services." The official, Lindley C. Morton, a director in the corporation, told the court that $1,000 of the $1,500 fee paid by his firm to Col. McMullen, then chief of the patents section of the War Department, was for work he (Col. McMullen) had done during April, 1932.

The additional $500, he said, represented retainers for the months of May and June, the rate being $250 a month.

Morton testified McMullen had told him he was engaged in the private practice of law and was no longer on active duty with the department. He also said he had commended Col. McMullen for his services in helping the Cuban firm defeat the proposed tax on manganese.

George Gordon Battle, well-known New York City attorney, testified that Col. McMullen had assisted officers of the firm in making contacts with high Government officers. He related a conference at the Willard Hotel when representatives of the corporation talked to Government officials in opposition to the tax. At this conference, he said, the corporation's plans for defeating the then pending tax bill were discussed. Battle stated McMullen made appointments with officials at the Commerce and State Departments, although he (McMullen) did not go on the conferences. Trial was adjourned with routine witnesses from the War Department appearing to introduce records.

Earthquake Terrorizes Chinese Famine Area

Chungking, Szechwan Province, China, April 28 (AP).—A heavy earthquake today terrorized residents of Szechwan Province, already in the grip of a famine.

The quake did little damage here, but greatly alarmed the population. Damage in remote sections, however, was undetermined.

The shock was believed to have extended throughout west China. It followed one on Monday which shook Tachienlu, on the Tibetan border, the worst recorded in many years.

'Jersey's Jobless Vote to Leave State House

Move Follows Assembly's Decision to Oust Army From Chamber.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., April 29.—New Jersey's unemployed decided tonight on peaceful evacuation of the State house after the Assembly voted to end the nine-day burlesque of its activities.

John Spain, jr., 32-year-old leader of the jobless, termed "a face-saving gesture" the Assembly's action in directing the State house custodian to bar the unemployed from the chamber, where they ate and slept day and night in protest against the Legislature's failure to provide relief funds.

"Our work is done," said Spain. "We are going back to our homes to organize the unemployed."

Relief Measure Passed.

Despite Spain's announcement, the 200 unemployed, who relinquished their seats during the Assembly's session, remained in the gallery, watching the proceedings in silence.

The Senate passed the measure to return relief administration to municipalities and establish Gov. Harold G. Hoffman and four high State officials as a State relief fund distributing commission.

The vote was 19 to 0, with the Democratic minority giving solid support despite its criticism it was "a dangerous thing" to place relief fund distribution in the hands of officials holding office "through politics."

House O. K. Expected.

The Republican Senate majority accepted a minority amendment to prohibit State allotments to municipalities to pay administrative costs. All State allotments would be devoted actually to aiding the needy.

The bill went to the House for expected approval there.

The resolution ordering the State House custodian to allow no one on the floor after adjournment was adopted by an oral vote without dissent after its sponsor, Assemblyman Joseph C. Paul, Essex Republican, read a telegram which threatened to "kick" Paul out of the Assembly and hold him "responsible for any bloodshed."

St. Louis Besiegers Start Hunger Strike.

St. Louis, April 29 (AP).—To enforce their demands for relief, 30 men and women besieging the chambers of the board of aldermen voted late today to go on a "hunger strike."

The decision was made after police were ordered by Health Commissioner Joseph F. Bredeck to permit no further delivery of food to the group participating in the "relief siege."

Leaders of the protesting group asserted 10 of their number—40 began the demonstration yesterday—left the building for food and were not permitted to return.

Dr. Bredeck said he issued the order because there were no facilities for eating in the crowded, narrow gallery and "a bad sanitary condition" would result if food were served there.

The "hunger protesters" began their passive campaign yesterday when the board of aldermen adjourned until May 11 without taking action on their demand that the city appropriate $500,000 a month for relief purposes.

Princess Juliana, 27; Remains Unbetrothed

The Hague, The Netherlands, April 29 (AP).—Dutch citizens will hoist flags tomorrow to commemorate the fact the Princess Juliana, heiress to the throne, will have anothre birthday — her twenty-seventh.

At the same time the question "When is Juliana going to marry?" will be asked from one end of Holland to the other.

Still unbetrothed, Juliana needs only to marry, it is agreed, to put the final touch on a huge popularity with her people. Each rumor that a husband has been chosen has brought national excitement during recent years.

50,000 Expected to Witness Apple Blossom Festival Today

By Elizabeth K. Read.

A Staff Correspondent.

Winchester, Va., April 29.—Although the apple trees are not quite in full bloom, and the weatherman fears intermittent showers for tomorrow, Winchester is all ready and standing on tip-toes for the thirteenth annual celebration of the apple blossoms of the Shenandoah Valley.

Tomorrow at 10 a. m., the two-day Shenandoah apple blossom festival begins, and for that period the blanket of pink petals that covers the hills and acres of the fertile valley will be the toast of thousands as a crowd assembles from all over the country to do honor to the Shenandoah and its rich apple crop.

The last preparation was made this afternoon, when classes in all the Winchester schools were closed for a dress rehearsal for the big day tomorrow. More than 1,000 youngsters, gay in colorful costumes of paper, cellophane and cheese cloth, went through their dances and pantomimes for the last practice before the official opening of the festival.

The broad steps and terraces of the Handley High School, an imposing colonial brick structure on a hill directly outside the town, will be the scene of the highlight of the festival tomorrow, when the queen is crowned and the pageant is played in her honor.

Pageant Prepared.

"Dawn, a Pageant of Springtime," has been prepared for the fete queen's pleasure, and for months the children, from the smallest in the kindergartens to those who will earn their high school diplomas this year, have been practicing before and after school, during classes and at home. Every child in the town has a part.

The pageant is a three-part fantasy, the first dealing with the lavish gifts of spring flowers, birds and breezes. Then comes Columbus begging jewels from Queen Isabella of Spain so that he might find America, followed by a portrayal of the colonial days in Virginia. Finally there is a fantasy of the growth of the apple tree, from the seedling to the tree in full blossom.

The pageant, written by the high school principal, Garland R. Quarles, and directed by the physical education instructor, Virginia Boyd Barr, will be given both tomorrow and Friday, the closing day of the festival.

Today Quarles stood before the dancing children reading the bits of verse that tell the story of the pageant. Down below him his voice was amplified to the grandstands of the athletic field where the audience will be seated tomorrow. Today the stands were gay with the summer dresses of proud mothers who watched their children. The school band played vigorously under the direction of its leader, a sun hat pulled low over his face and his arms beating time for the children's feet.

Town Decorated.

While the pageant was in rehearsal at the high school, the sound of pounding hammers filled the main streets, as the last minute preparations were made to impress the visitors. The two main streets of the little town are decorated with banners of the apple blossom hues, soft pink, green and white. Every lamp post is garlanded with apple blossoms painted on wooden guards, store windows are decked with sprays and everywhere temporary refreshment stands are being erected for Winchester's two big days of the year.

Out in front of the B. P. O. E. of the town stands the symbol of the festival, which each year is put on exhibition—a 10-foot apple with ruddy skin, and a spray of green leaves.

Officials of the festival estimated that 50,000 people would come to Winchester tomorrow for the opening of the celebration and to see the queen crowned. On Friday, a crowd of 100,000 is expected.

And the center of the celbration, the queen herself, a smiling brunette, debutante of Richmond, Cornelia Anne Larus, was as excited as the tinest child in the pageant who is not sure she will remember her steps tomorrow when faced with a crowd in the grandstands.

Guest of Mrs. Byrd.

She arrived last evening and is the guest of Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd, mother of Senator Harry Byrd, who is one of the leading supporters of the festival. Senator Byrd, one of the large apple growers of the State, will be host to Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware, who will crown the queen tomorrow. Senator Townsend is a particularly fitting choice for the honor of crowning the Apple Blossom queen, for he is one of the large apple growers of his State, his farms producing over 50,000 barrels of apples each year.

A number of distinguished guests will pay tribute to the slim, dark-eyed Queen Shenandoah XIII tomorrow. Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, of California, will have a place of honor in the grandstand, and representing Gov. George C. Peery of the State will be Lieut. Gov. James H. Price.

The history of the Apple Blossom Festival is one the residents of Winchester love to tell, for the annual celebration is the greatest holiday of the year.

Ryan Given Credit.

"Dad" Ryan, owner of an apple farm near Winchester, it seems, thought the poetry of the blossoms so lovely that he suggested a yearly festival to draw the national attention to them. Other citizens were enthusiastic, and from a small festival 13 years ago, one of the most colorful spectacles in the country has grown.

Each year a bit of the wood from old Fort Loudoun, standing on the hill outside the town, is fashioned into a lasting mememto for the queen by a local wood-carver, 82-year-old John W. Nail. The fort, so the story goes, was built by George Washington. Nail carves a comlimentary key to the town for the queen.

Already the three hotels of the town are turning away people who have motored from far and near for the opening of the festivities tomorrow. Tourist houses are doing a rush business, and the restaurants and drug store luncheon counters are crowded.

A glance at the licenses of automobiles shows the wide interest of the festival. California, Florida, Maine, Connecticut, Ohio, Illinois and 18 other State tags were tabulated by a 10-year-old boy, within three blocks of the main hotel of the town.

Special police arrangements have been made, and a squad of 40 officers, trained to handle crowds, is in town from Richmond to augment the local force. In addition, the white motorcycles and motor cars of the State police are everywhere, and special railway detectives have been dispatched to this little town of 12,000 inhabitants, to guard visitors arriving by train.

'Judges of Hell' Renew Threats Against France

Maniacal Letters Declare Bombers of 1934 Will Wreck Trains.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 29.—The "three judges of hell" who terrorized Paris in 1934 by sending home-made bombs through the mails, have threatened now to turn to train wrecking.

Claiming "divine inspiration" to "purge the French nation," the apparently mad man or men who signed letters inside the many bombs "Minos, Aeacus and Rhadamanthus," declared an intention of blowing up railway trains unless fantastic demands are met by the authorities.

For police officials, who spent many fruitless months trying to run down the criminals, the boast seems capable of execution.

Minos, Aeacus and Rhadamanthus are characters from Greek mythology who were supposed to judge the dead in hell.

"Since the French people show themselves more and more cowardly and servile before the wealthy malefactors and desire reforms less and less," read an incoherent letter heralding the return to action, "Minos, Aeacus and Rhadamanthus demand that prison sentences not be handed out like arithmetic problems."

The writer, thought to be a maniac, said he "knew how to derail trains" if his demands were not met.

The first appearance of the "Three Judges of Hell" was in June, 1934. A parcel post package exploded in a branch postoffice, tearing three fingers off a clerk's hand. Two weeks later, a bomb exploded in a subway station, killing the stationmaster and wounding two persons.

Brown Speaks At Police Boys Band Banquet

Calls on Business Men to Support Group as Crime Preventive.

Sixty-six members of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, resplendent in their crimson uniforms, were feted last night by police officials and civic leaders at a banquet at Scholl's Cafe.

Mayor Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, was the main speaker. He lauded the work of the club in cutting down juvenile delinquency in the District.

"Crime costs the District more than $15,000,000 annually," he said. "The boys clubs are attacking crime by preventing it and killing it in its infancy. Since the businessmen pay most of the cost of crime, I believe they should contribute to the cost of the club work."

Points to Decline.

He pointed out that juvenile delinquency had dropped 74 per cent in the three communities where clubs had been established in 1934, and urged that the $135,000 necessary to carry on this work be donated the Police Department.

Other speakers were James E. Colliflower, president of the club; James A. Councilor, auditor; Col. Clinton J. Brown, its founder; Clinton J. Brown, jr., the bandmaster; John P. Meshkoff, director, and Inspectors L. I. H. Edwards, Bernard W. Thompson, J. F. Beckett, Benjamin A. Lamb, William G. Stott and William Holmes.

After the dinner Meshkoff noticed two small boys, one white and one a Negro, playing in the street. It was 10:30 p. m. and Meshkoff decided they ought to be home and in bed.

Gave Them Big Dinner.

Before taking them there, he brought them into the cafe and fed them such a lamb chop dinner as they had not had in a long time. They gave their names as Leonard Roy Miller, 8, of 1219 Tenth street northwest, and Gilbert Nixon, jr., Negro, 10, of 1229 Tenth street.

The latter giggled all the way through the meal as waitresses crowded around and plied his pal with questions as to how he go so dirty. When asked whether he had any parents, young Miller's answer was:

"If I didn't have a father and mother, I'd be dead. I couldn't get any food."

Egyptian Monarch To Be Buried Today

Cairo, Egypt, April 29 (AP).—The body of King Fuad arrived at Abdin palace in Cairo at sunset today from his country palace, where the monarch died yesterday.

The procession, preceded by cavalry units with black draped lances, moved through streets packed with people. The coffin was borne on a guncarriage.

King Fuad will be buried tomorrow. His successor, 16-year-old Crown Prince Farouk, was officially proclaimed king last night and students in mourning processions today chanted, "Long Live Farouk, King of Egypt and The Sudan."

The young monarch, who will rule for two years under a regency, was expected to leave London tomorrow.

An election will be held May 2 for a new parliament.

Europe on Guard For May Day Riots

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, April 29.—Troops and gendarmes were mobilized throughout Europe tonight in readiness for May day, Europe's usually turbulent labor day.

Precautionary measures were ordered while millions of workers from London to Moscow prepared to lay down their tools Friday and pour into the streets for celebrations.

In France, Spain, Russia, England and Czechoslovakia, the workers will demonstrate against Fascism and war.

German celebrations will be for Hitler and the Nazi state.

In Italy May day will pass unobserved. Italians celebrated Labor day April 21.

Nazi Putsch Plan Foiled in Hungary

Budapest, Hungary, April 29 (AP). Watchful officers of the Hungarian army remained close to their posts tonight after police, by a series of raids, disclosed apparent plans for a Nazi putsch Friday.

Eighteen Nazi leaders, including Dr. Zoltan Boszomeny, asserted chief of the National Socialist movement in Hungary, were held in jail.

The raids resulted in the seizure of 40 uniforms of Hungarian army colonels and generals in Dr. Boszormeny's Budapest home. These uniforms, authorities believe, were to be used by Nazis in an attempt to take over command of the troops in the capital.

House Greets Zioncheck, Bride; Couple Gets Parental Blessing

Still replying, "what honeymoon?" or "whose wedding?" to reporters' queries on his Annapolis marriage Tuesday, Representative Marion A. Zioncheck and his 20-year-old bride received an ovation by the House yesterday.

At the same time, indications came from Texarkana, Tex., that the marital union of the Seattle playboy and the PWA secretary has the blessing of the latter's parents.

An Associated Press dispatch from the home town of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Nix, parents of Rubye Louise Nix Zioncheck, said the mother was not surprised when the couple telephoned her Tuesday night and told what had happened.

"They said they would visit us as soon as Congress adjourns," Mrs. Nix is reported to have said.

A roll call was in progress yesterday when a House member spotted Mrs. Zioncheck, accompanied by Speaker Byrns, seated in the members' gallery. Upon his signal, there was a wave of applause that drowned out the clerk's roll call.

Mrs. Zioncheck, dressed in a blue gown, white coat and wide brimmed white hat, rewarded her husband's colleagues with a smile. Shortly afterward Speaker Byrns and Zioncheck left the gallery, but Mrs. Zioncheck remained for a while to watch proceedings.

School to Train FutureOfficials Of U. S. Hailed

Women's Clubs Back Plan for 'West Point' of Civil Government.

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, April 29.—A training school for prospective public office holders, patterned after West Point and Annapolis, today was accorded the active support of America's 2,000,000 club women.

Hailed as a measure to bring "trained intelligence to our national political problems," the proposal embodying legislation now pending before Congress for the creation of a national academy of public affairs, was given loud approval by the General Federation of Women's Clubs Council.

The council voted, with only 12 dissenting votes, its approval of the bill introduced by Representative Disney, of Oklahoma, incorporating reform proposals championed by Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the general federation. Mrs. Lawson is from Tulsa, Okla.

The purpose of the public affairs academy would be to train men and women for Federal administrative offices, including the diplomatic corps.

Selection of students would conform to the procedure employed in nominating for the Army and Naval academies, with each representative having the right to name one student each year from his district; each Senator, two annually from his State, and the President, 50 at large.

A proposal favoring the United States' participation the League of Nations was returned to the resolutions committee for drastic rewording or abandonment of a clause declaring such action should not oblige this country "to adopt measures which might involve use of armed forces."

Bunchuk Plans to Launch New Orchestra Here

Fairfax Oyster Assisting Former Associate of Famous 'Roxy.'

With the dispute between the National Symphony Orchestra Association and the local musician's union on contract terms still unsettled, announcement was made yesterday of a plan to start a new symphony orchestra in Washington.

The proposed orchestra is the plan of Yasha Bunchuk, formerly a musician with the late Samuel Rothafel (Roxy), according to the announcement yesterday by Fairfax Oyster, music enthusiast and Convention Hall butter merchant.

If Bunchuk persists in his plan the first result would be a race between his gorup and the National Symphony Association for possession of the barge and watergate location used last year for the "sunset concerts." The orchestra association, if it can adjust its labor difficulties, plans to renew the series this summer.

Oyster said yesterday that if Bunchuk can obtain the barge he plans to present summer concerts featuring some celebrity such as Maj. Bowes, of the radio amateur hour. Bowes was formerly manager of the Capital Theater Orchestra in New York City, of which Bunchuk was director.

It was learned yesterday that Bunchuk and Oyster have held discussions with C. Marshall Finnan, of the National Capital Parks, controllers of the watergate location near Arlington Memorial Bridge. They have thus far, however, made no formal application for a permit.

Oyster said yesterday that Bunchuk's desire to start an orchestra was due to his love for Washington. "He is crazy about the Capital," said Oyster.

According to Oyster, Bunchuk has strong financial backing and has obtained the support of several wealthy music lovers whose names he did not divulge.

C. C. Cappel, manager of the National Symphony, said yesterday that he would not comment until he had had more time to study the situation. He remarked, however, that "anybody has the right to start an orchestra . . . but we don't find it easy to keep one orchestra going."

Miss Elizabeth M. Hewitt Will Be Buried Today

Miss Hewitt died in Mystic, Conn., last Monday. She was born in Mount Alton, Pa., February 12, 1872. During the Spanish-American War, she served from July 29, 1898, until February 28, 1899, as a contract nurse. She was one of the first group of nurses to be assigned to duty when the Navy Nurse Corps was established in 1908.

McSwain Offers New Army Housing Bill

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, of the House Military Affairs Committee, introduced an Army housing bill for the War Department yesterday to substitute for one he introduced earlier in the session.

The bill proposed the appropriation of $29,960,733 over four years to improve the housing conditions and the facilities at various Army posts and barracks.

The list included Fort Belvoir, Va., $667,625; Fort Monroe, Va., $523,900; Fort Myer, Va., $202,600; Nansemond Ordnance, Va., $143,200.

Malone to Quit Army at Own Request Today

Ninth Corps Area Commander to Be 64 Next Week; Served 45 Years.

Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, former commander of the Third Corps Area, with headquarters in Baltimore, and for more than 45 years in the Army service, will be retired today at his own request, the War Department announced. He will be 64 years old next week.

Since December, 1934, when he left his Baltimore post, Gen. Malone has been in command of the Ninth Army Corps, with headquarters in San Francisco. His post there will be assumed by Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, former commandant of the Army War College here and now deputy chief of staff.

Before the appointment of Maj. Gen. Malin Craig as chief of staff, Gen. Simonds was reported one of those being considered for the post. The transfer to San Francisco, it is understood, was at his own request.

Fought in Spanish War.

A graduate of West Point, Gen. Malone fought in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection and in the World War. As the commanding officer of the Tenth Brigade of the Fifth Division, which fought heroically in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives, the general received the Distinguished Service Medal and the French Croix de Guerre.

The author of a number of military works, including a five-volume series on cadet life at West Point, Gen. Malone was an instructor in chemistry at the academy for four years. During 1925 and 1926 he was in command of the Second Division in Texas and in 1928 and 1929, of the Sixth Corps Area in Chicago. From 1929 to 1931 he commanded the Philippine Department.

The general's Army career began with an assignment to the Thirteenth United States Infantry in New York State. When the Spanish-American War broke out Malone, then a staff officer, went to Cuba. In the spring of 1898 he joined the American forces in the Philippines.

Instructor at West Point.

Two years later he returned to the United States as a chemistry instructor at West Point. In 1908 he was sent to Cuba with the Army of Cuban Pacification, returning to this country two years later. In March, 1911, he was detailed to the general staff corps and ordered to this city for duty.

The folowing year he went abroad to observe the maneuvers of the French, British and German armies, gaining an intimate knowledge of those three armies that was to serve him well in the succeeding war years. After the armistice he served in Luxembourg and Germany as commanding general of the Tenth Infantry Brigade.

His next assignment was to this city with the war plans division of the general staff until April, 1920.

In the three years that Gen. Malone served as commanding officer in the Baltimore area he was identified with numerous civic and local activities, including the community chest fund and the Association of Commerce.

Mrs. Cromwell is a trustee of the Duke endowment, created by her father, the late J. B. Duke.

With Metal in Lung Girl Faces Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., April 29.—Expressing grave concern over the condition of 16-year-old Pauline Lane, physicians said tonight they hoped she would improve enough in the next six days to permit a third operation for removal of a cigarette lighter top from her left lung.

Meanwhile, Pauline, breathing almost entirely with her right lung, lay listlessly on her hospital bed, unaware that physicians had failed yesterday in an attempt to remove the metal object with special forceps sent here from Philadelphia.

The young girl, who swallowed the inch-long metal cap last Friday while laughing, was described by hospital attendants as "seriously ill."

Ayres Predicts Continued Low Interest Rates

Bankers Convention Told Economic Effects of Excess Reserves.

By the Associated Press.

Hot Springs, Va., April 29.—The economic policy commission of the American Bankers Association reported today that interest rates may be expected to continue at low levels, unless excess reserves are reduced or prices rise sharply.

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, of Cleveland, chairman of the commission, presented a summary of its conclusions to the executive council after a study of "the probable duration of this low interest rate period."

The reports said Federal action to reduce reserves or a general price rise "far above present levels and above those that prevailed in the years before the depression" would be necessary to raise interest rates.

Huge Excess Reserves.

"The general conclusions at which we arrive are that the prevailing low levels of interest rates are primarily due to the existing huge excess reserves of member banks, and that a contributing factor operating to keep them low is found in the large volume and slow turnover to demand deposits in the banks," Col. Ayres said.

"The volume of excess reserves could be reduced or increased by gold exports or imports, or by various actions which might be taken by the Federal Reserve authorities, or by the Treasury Department.

"We consider it unlikely that there will soon be good exports of such magnitude as largely to decrease the excess reserves. Moreover, it seems improbable that the Administration and the Federal Reserve authorities will take, or can safely take, the steps that would sharply reduce the excess reserves of banks and result in materially higher interest rates, until the Government is well on the way toward balancing its budget and has refunded most of its short-term debt."

Effect of Climbing Prices.

With long-continued business improvement, he said, Federal borrowers presumably will be progressively reduced and finally terminated. Meanwhile, the volume of demand deposits will be increasing as long as "deficit financing" is being done.

"This must result in a continued low rate of turnover of demand deposits, despite business recovery," Col. Ayres reported.

The commission concluded from these premises, he said, that much reduced reserves or rapidly climbing prices alone could change the situation. "Even with continued business recovery, good progress toward budget balancing and the refunding of most of the short-term Federal debt."

Justice Department To Get OARP Data

Los Angeles, Calif., April 29 (AP).—A Department of Justice investigation of the Townsend pension plan finances became a possibility tonight with an announcement that testimony taken in public hearings here would be turned over to Federal authorities.

Representative Joseph A. Gavagan, New York Democrat and member of the House committee conducting hearings on the plan, said the evidence would be given to the department when the sub-committee returns to Washington this week.

O. Otto Moore, Denver lawyer and one-time Townsend Congressional lobby member, told the sub-committee yesterday that Dr. Francis E. Townsend, father of the $200-a-month plan, approved a campaign to raise money from Townsend clubs for the delegation after members had given up their 1935 fight for pension legislation.

Moore said $22,500 already had been collected for the Washington group and that R. E. Clements, then secretary-treasurer, told him only $2,404.96 had been spent for support of its activities.

Women Opposed To Amendment

Cincinnati, April 29 (AP).—An outbreak of criticism and defense of a proposed equal rights amendment to the United States Constitution climaxed today's session of the twelfth convention of the National League of Women Voters, with delegates finally voting to continue unqualified opposition to the amendment.

Earlier, delegates debated heatedly proposed activity for State legislation to improve conditions of work, wages and hours for women workers. The National Woman's Party, sponsor of the equal rights amendment, holds that such legislation discriminates against women, placing them in a favored class.

Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, of Washington, asserted league members in the Capital had been "annoyed by proponents of the equal rights amendment."

Dublin, April 29 (U.P.).—Armed civic guards tonight arrested 16 Republicans in County Cork, including Sean MacSwiney, brother of the late Terrence MacSwiney, who, as Mayor of Cork, starved himself to death in jail.

Dudley's Daughter Attempts Suicide

New York, April 29 (AP).—Detectives reported tonight that Doris Dudley, 18, daughter of Bide Dudley, the dramatic critic, shot herself in the chest with a rifle in the apartment of Sidney Kingsley, the playwright, to whom she has been reported engaged.

Miss Dudley, an actress, has been appearing in "End of Summer" at the Guild Theater.

Police said the shooting was the result of a quarrel between her and Kingsley.

At York Hospital, where Miss Dudley was taken, it was said she was not seriously injured.

Italian Column In Final Drive To Addis Ababa

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 29.—An Italian motorized column turned due west today for a final push on Addis Ababa.

The daily communique from Marshall Pietro Badoglio, commander-in-chief of the African armies, announced the occupation of Macfud, about 170 kilometers (about 106 miles) from Dessye.

Unofficial reports had the column reaching Koro Gassa, which is the point where the road from Dessye turns sharply west for a straight run to the capital. Natives were described as friendly.

Heavy tropical rains, meanwhile, slowed down the drive of the southern army against Sasa Baneh, where an Ethiopian army is standing to prevent capture of the impotrant city of Harar. Patrols were active, however.

In its advance on the capital the northern army is exercising every precaution against falling into a trap. Scouting planes are engaged in almost constant reconnaissance flights to prevent the main column from falling into an ambush, and an advance infantry patrol also affords a safeguard.

In the meantime, an Eritrean column is advancing along an old caravan route more to the west and more on a direct line to the capital than the auto road. This column crossed the Mofer River and occupied the mountain height of Doba.

With the fall of Addis Ababa apparently in sight, heavy shipments of workmen to Africa continue, indicating Premier Mussolini intends to continue large scale work even after peace. The S. S. Umbria sailed today from Naples with 2,090 workmen.

Guardsmen, Plane Hunt Tug on Lake Michigan

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—Coast Guard boats and an airplane joined tonight in the search for the 45-foot fishing tug H. Waterhill, overdue since 6 p. m. Tuesday. Four men were aboard.

The Coast Guard cutter Rush was ordered to carty on the search, as Patrol Boat 119 returned without sighting the tug in lower Lake Michigan.

Seeks Air Record.

Los Angeles, April 29 (AP).—Two young aviators disclosed plans today to fly from Los Angeles to Newark, N. J., late this week in an attempt to make a distance record for small aircraft.

They are Bob Buck, of Westfield, N. J., and his cousin, Lee Ballingrath, both 23.

Hearst Appeals, Fearing Seizure Of More Wires

By the Associated Press.

Expressing fear that other private messages would be made public in violation of his constitutional rights, William Randolph Hearst yesterday carried his fight against the Senate Lobby Committee to a higher court.

Elisha Hanson, Hearst's attorney, filed a petition in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals asking for a special and prompt review of the District of Columbia Supreme Court's refusal to grant an injunction to restrain the committee from seizing his telegrams.

"Delay would affect petitioner's (Hearst's) constitutional rights," the petition said, "and result in serious injury."

Chief Justice Wheat, of the District Supreme Court, dismissed the petition for an injunction. The petition said, "solely because his view of the Constitution is that he has no jurisdiction to restrain the members of a Senate committee from committing any acts even if those acts be in a flagrant violation of the first, the fourth and fifth amendments of the Constitution."

"No matter how reprehensible or odious those acts may be," the petition added, "no matter what the injury resulting therefrom or threatened thereby, the effect of Mr. Chief Justice Wheat's decision is that the courts of this country have no power to restrain the members of a Senate committee."

The petition asserted the lobby committee and the Federal Communications Commission, against which theoriginal injunction also was sought, were still in a position to violate constitutional rights.

"The Senate committee," it said, "is still proceeding with its investigation. It is in a position to make further use of the messages which it illegally obtained through the illegal acts of the Federal Communications Commission."

Miners' Parley Decides Today On Wage War

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 29.—A strike or peace decision tomorrow in the two-month-old wage contract deadlock of Pennsylvania's great anthracite industry was forecast tonight when a sub-committee of negotiators announced its dissolution.

Still at odds on every point, operators and United Mine Worker members said they would report their conversations tomorrow morning to the full joint conference of 14.

Midnight tomorrow was fixed by the spokesman as the expiration time of a 30-day extension of the old contract, beyond which union miners would not work unless a new pact was forthcoming.

Into the decision, affecting 106,000 mine workers, was bound the employment hopes of some 40,000 unemployed who might again take up tools if the union won its demand for equalized working time and a week of 30 hours instead of 48.

Likewise, the outcome held in its balance the wide-flung interests of operators who asserted the industry, hemmed in by the keenly competitive struggle of oil, coke and gas for greater markets, needed to cut its costs.

They asked a wage reduction to 1918 levels, a 5-year contract assuring freedom from disruptive wage disputes, and union co-operation to restrain jobless miners from unauthorized mining at unmanned collieries.

President Roosevelt's message urging the conferees to make a prompt settlement of their difficulties was delivered today by phone by Edward McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Sales Drive Stock Down

occurring in the market for the English pound sterling indicated that there was no real fear among bankers of any change of policy by the Administration.

Offerings of the major telephone issue were said to have been relatively heavy from Amsterdam. Domestic liquidation apparently was based partly on fears that the present Federal inquiry into the affairs of the world's largest corporation might bring a campaign for lower rates with a consequent reduction of earnings.

The exceptional softness of "Big Steel" was a bit discouraging to the analysts, in view of the company's first quarter showing which was the best for any similar period since 1931. At the same time, it was realized that the issue has had a lengthy advance from its last year's low and was vulnerable for profit taking.

Industrial news continued to stress the progress of economic recovery, although, in many instances, financial circles thought stocks may have outrun business gains.

On the cheerful side was the estimate of Iron Age that current steel production is at 69 per cent of capacity, an upturn of 1 point over the preceding week. Electric power consumption was also found to be expanding more than normally.

Light offerings again depressed all sections of the bond market today with the exception of high grade investment issues which maintained a steady undertone. Total sales for the day amounted to only $8,839,000, par value, compared with $10,050,000 the day before, and of this amount Governments accounted for but $220,000, the smallest for a full five-hour session in several months.

A bad upset in the stock market, passage by the House of the new tax bill, intensification of the uncertainties abroad by rumors that foreign investors were taking steps to hedge against further inflation in Europe, were among factors at work to bring out scattered offerings that found takers only at concessions of minor fractions to more than a point.

Two groups used in the Associated Press averages touched a new 1936 low. The industrials at 102.0 were off .1 of a point and the foreign group at 68.9 were off .6 of a point, largely as a result of severe declines in Polish issues. Other groups in the averages were unchanged to .2 of a point lower.

Missing Woman Found a Stowaway

Hopedale, Mass., April 29 (AP).—Announcement of the safe arrival in London today of Mrs. Eben S. Draper, 42, wife of a widely known Republican and textile machinery manufacturer, reported missing since April 19, was received by the manufacturer today in a cable from her.

The message declared she was "perfectly well." She crossed the ocean aboard the Cunard-White Star motorship Georgic as "Mrs. Glyn."

Notes mailed by her shortly after she vanished from a Katonah, N. Y., sanitarium, in which she hinted at suicide, had aroused an international search.

London, April 29 (AP).—A woman giving the name "Mrs. Draper," who stowed away on the S. S. Georgic in New York, was landed at the Georgic's London docks tonight, ship's officers said.

Bel Air Hears Breckinridge's Bid for Ballots

Anti-New Deal Democrat Attacks Opponents as "Russocrats."

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., April 29.—Col. Henry Breckinridge, carrying his Presidential primary campaign to the voters of Maryland, asserted tonight that the "political virility" of the people within a State must be their protection against extortionate charges by public utilities.

Breckinridge, anti-New Deal Democrat, termed his opponents "Russocrats" in a speech for delivery here.

Urging the States to retain their own control over industries wholly within their borders, the Presidential candidate said:

"A skillful use of the Federal power over interstate commerce can solve every problem and erect every protection that can be constructively affected by Washington politicians . . . if the people within a State have not the political virility to protect themselves from extortionate charges by public utilities, then all self-government is hopeless."

Breckinridge, wearing the approval of the Association for the Defense of the Constitution, defended the Constitution's ability to operate under modern conditions.

"There is," he said, "no economic problem susceptible of political solution that cannot be solved under the existing division of powers under the Constitution."

Men "with the itch for absolute power" taunt the people with the "confusion and failure" displayed during times of depression, Breckinridge said.

He criticized the abrogation of the air mail contracts.

"I don't like the kind of American," he said, "who, finding himself clothed with temporary political power, lynches air-mail carriers."

Breckinridge asserted that the late Gov. Albert C. Ritchie "remains one of the most significant figures in the current political scene." He likened him to Henry Clay, who practiced "disciplined conformity" with his party only until conformity "violated greater loyalty to his country."

"If the government in Washington," he concluded, "even approximated the economy, the skill, the intelligence, the orderly constitutional procedure applied by Gov. Ritchie in Maryland, there could be no occasion for complaint or opposition today on the part of any constitutional Democrat of the Nation."

Pape was rushed to Hershey Hospital. He received an abdominal bullet wound and physicians do not expect him to recover.

Smith, Ford, Hughes, Coughlin Get Votes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boston, April 28.—Party lines were crossed often in the Presidential preference primaries of the two parties today as voters wrote in the names of their favorites.

Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican candidate, received votes of two Democrats and the name of President Roosevelt was written in on some of Republican ballots.

Also appearing on a few Republican ballots were the names of Alfred E. Smith, Henry Ford, Charles Evans Hughes and Father Charles F. Coughlin.

On Democratic ballots were found the names of Senator William E. Borah, Dr. F. E. Townsend, James Roosevelt, Newton D. Baker and Owen D. Young.

Air Crash Board Is Urged by Vidal

By the Associated Press.

Creation of an independent accident board to investigate the Nation's air crashes was recommended to the Senate Air Safety Committee yesterday by Eugene L. Vidal, director of the Air Commerce Bureau.

He said "it is proving embarrassing to have our own personnel in a position where they must judge our own inspection and airways services along with air line operations."

Citing the accident which killed Senator Bronson Cutting (Republican), of New Mexico, and four others in Missouri, May 6, 1935, and the subsequent controversy over responsibility, Vidal testified:

"I personally hope that your committee will suggest for the future an accident board consisting of other than bureau personnel."

George F. Tear Indicted in Auto 'Convoy' Chase

Is Charged With Effort to Crowd Police Car Off the Road.

An indictment charging George F. Tear with assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill was returned by the District grand jury yesterday in connection with a wild automobile chase, in which Tear allegedly tried to force a pursuing police car off the road. The indictment was presented to Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in the District Supreme Court.

Tear, convicted two months ago of participation in a liquor ring conspiracy, is charged with having sped from Third street and Indiana avenue northwest to West Executive avenue, with Policemen William Thompson and Irving Lubore in close pursuit. During the chase, the officers said, Tear's car several times narrowly missed crowding the police off the road.

The officers declared Tear told them he was employed to "convoy" another car and was to prevent seizure of the other car at all costs. Police said he refused to tell any more about his duties.

In all, 54 indictments were returned and five cases were reported in which the grand jury refused to indict.

Among the others indicted was Waynon Keels, Negro, who is charged with having wrested away from Sergt. C. H. Lutz, of the Second Precinct, his service revolver when the latter was trying to arrest him. The officer declared Keels shot at him once, the bullet penetrating his overcoat.

British Plans Cited to Justify U. S. Warships

Standley Says Empire Has Budget Commitment for 2 Battleships.

A budgetary commitment by the British government to build two new battleships in 1937 was cited as sufficient justification for the United States to do likewise under the terms of the recent naval treaty by Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy and delegate to the naval conference, at a press conference yesterday.

His statement was made in reply to queries from reporters as to how the legislation now being drafted by the House Naval Committee to permit the building of two new $50,000,000 battleships, when and if President Roosevelt sees the need for them, was affected by the tretay.

The entire sum for the two vessels is not being sought at present, Standley having recommended to the President only that $10,000,000 already allocated to the Navy Department be used to start work on the ships.

The announcement of the British government's naval construction plans in the recent White Paper, Standley said, in itself would not be sufficient justification for the launching of a similar building program by the United States.

However, he pointed out that definite budgetary measures had been taken by England committing herself to the construction of these ships. Under the terms of the treaty, he said, budgetary measures by one nation could fairly be interpreted as lifting the restriction on similar construction by the other signatories.

Whether the new naval treaty signed at London by this country, Great Britain and France will be presented to the Senate this session for ratification was still undecided yesterday. The question was believed discussed yesterday at the White House when Undersecretary of State William Phillips conferred with the President following morning conferences of Phillips with Standley and Norman H. Davis, chief of the American delegation to the recent London conference.

N. Y. House Kills Lehman's Aid Bill

Albany, N. Y., April 29 (AP).—The Republican majority definitely killed Gov. Lehman's social security program in the Assembly today after Democratic leaders had called it a "great piece of humane legislation" and Republicans had labeled it a "gigantic hoax."

Three Republicans joined the Democratic attempt to get the measure on the Assembly floor, but their assistance was unavailing. The final vote was 73 to 71, to keep the bill locked in committee.

The Democratic-controlled Senate already had passed the bill.

The eight-point program sponsored by the Governor would require an expenditure of about $4,000,000 by New York State this year in order to receive contributions of about $20,000,000 from the Federal Government.

Motive Hunted in Slaying Of Merchant, Daughter

Chicago, April 28 (AP).—Police sought a motive tonight to explain the double slaying of Pietro Viviano, 60, well-to-do macaroni manufacturer, and his daughter, Grace, 23, whose bodies were found today in their suburban Oak Park home.

Lieut. Harry Wilson said his investigation led him to believe Viviano shot his daughter as she lay asleep in an upstairs bedroom and then took his life with the same weapon. He was found dead in a chair downstairs.

Harrison Assails G.O.P. Brain Trust

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, said last night three members of the Republican National Committee's new professorial advisory staff had condemned the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill in 1930.

"I am pleased to observe that the Republican National Committee has come at last to realize the destructive blow which was struck against American commerce and trade by the indefensible Smoot - Hawley tariff bill," Harrison said in a statement released by the Democratic National Committee.

Harrison said he gave the Senate, while the tariff was pending, a condemnatory statement signed by 1,028 leading economists. Among them, he said, were Niles W. Carpenter, F. A. Bradford and Rufus S. Tucker, now members of the Republican committee staff.

Harrison said that Prof. Asher Hobson, another member of the Republican staff, "was the man who wrote the report on which the Canadian reciprocal tariff agreement was based, insofar as it applied to dairy products."

Mrs. Oliver Harriman heads the National Conference group. Alfred E. Smith, jr., is an official of the Golden Stakes Corporation.

Farley barred the mails to the two organizations following hearings before the Postoffice Department some weeks ago on charges of violating the postal lottery laws.

Attack on City Bankruptcy Act Heard by Court

N. Y. Wage Law, Wallace Livestock Order Argued in Highest Tribunal.

By the Associated Press.

Challenges of the constitutionality of a New Deal law—the 1934 municipal bankruptcy act — and of New York's minimum wage statute for women and children were pushed toward a final decision yesterday by the Supreme Court.

After hearing these cases argued, the justices listened briefly to Frederick H. Wood, New York attorney, call "confiscatory" the service charges established by Secretary Wallace for buying and selling livestock at the Kansas City market. Wood, representing commission men, will resume today.

The bankruptcy act—intended to aid cities, counties and other political subdivisions refund their debts in Federal courts—was assailed as a "violation of State sovereignty" by Palmer Hutcheson, Houston attorney for certain bondholders of the Cameron County (Tex.) Water Improvement District No. 1.

David M. Wood, New York, and W. B. Lewis, Harlingen, Tex., speaking for the water improvement district, replied that the act merely gave municipalities and taxing districts the right to institute a proceeding in the Federal courts.

"It does no more," Wood said, "than require a majority of creditors to accept a composition, tendered by the municipality, which has received the approval of the requisite majority of the creditors."

Attacking the New York law, Nathan L. Miller, former Governor of the State, asserted that the fixing of minimum wages "is a denial of the very essence of liberty."

"You cannot deprive all of liberty because liberty may have been abused by some," he said. "You cannot deprive all of the freedom to contract because some drive hard bargains."

Miller represented Joseph Tipaldo, Brooklyn laundry manager, indicted for alleged violation of the act. He won his release from the Brooklyn prison on a writ of habeas corpus.

The arguments in defense of the act were made on Tuesday by Henry Epstein, New York solicitor general, and Dean Acheson, former Undersecretary of the Treasury.

Final decisions in all three cases will be forthcoming before the court adjourns for the summer early in June. Lower courts held the bankruptcy act unconstitutional, the New York act invalid and affirmed Secretary Wallace's action.

Roosevelt Hope Only Pretense, Hastings Holds

Senator Assails 'Emptiness' of Administration's Prosperity Claims.

By the Associated Press.

Renewing his attack upon the New Deal, Senator Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, asserted yesterday the Roosevelt Administration was not as "optimistic about the approaching election as it pretends to be" because "it has too many things to explain to the intelligent voters."

Directing his speech from the Senate floor to the Democratic side of the aisle, Hastings said:

"The emptiness of your prosperity claims is recognized. You will get little satisfaction in quoting the increased profits from the annual reports of some business firms when it is remembered that most of these profits are being taken away by the Federal Government to meet the expenses of your extravagances, and when it is known that the little fellow in the business world whom you have prosecuted along with the big-business man, still has not yet recovered from your blows."

At one point he asked "whether it is any particular satisfaction to the 12,550,000 unemployed to find that stocks have increased on the New York Stock Exchange by $31,000,000,000?"

He also inquired whether the jobless "can eat the paper profits on the exchange."

Assailing the tax bill, Hastings said that Democratic leaders failed to mention that corporations had paid out more than $26,000,000,000 from surpluses to fight depression and that the "President has recommended that these surpluses be destroyed by taxation." In another phase of attack, he said:

"You cannot explain to the American people the unfairness of using your relief program to strengthen your political position."

At another point the Senator said the American people would not "quietly submit to their personal affairs being inquired into by an army of New Deal snoopers, their property seized without legal process," and would "not permit, unchallenged, the partian destruction of the freedom of the press."

The Home Town Boys.

The endeavor of Yasha Bunchuk to take over the Watergate setting for summer concerts should help to bring the local Musicians Union to its senses. It is quite possible that this proposal by a lieutenant of the late "Roxy" would seriously damage the survival chances of the National Symphony Orchestra. It would probably lower the standards of the concerts which were so popular with Washingtonians last summer. But how it would benefit the Musicians Union is not at all clear.

What the union is trying to do, in effect, is to keep musicians from other cities out of the National Symphony Orchestra. Whether music or any other technical service is in question, the principle underlying this narrow and bigoted attitude is impossible of acceptance. Public service, of whatever character, is entitled to the best performance that can be obtained for the means available. It goes without saying that local talent should be given preference when it is thoroughly competent. It also goes without saying that there should be no discrimination against the community by insisting that it rely on inferior workmanship merely because it is of local origin.

The weakness of the argument that home talent must come first is particularly glaring in the case of a profession which requires not merely technical skill but a high degree of artistic comprehension. It is obvious that the local symphony will be hamstrung unless it is free to attract the best musicians it can afford, regardless of their place of residence. All really great orchestras carry this attitude to the point where they bring in musicians from other countries whenever necessary to improve their competence.

The substitution of a Roxy orchestra for the National Symphony would be a natural result of the present attitude of the Musicians Union. But the cream of the jest is that such a decline in local musical values would mean no advantage for the home-town boys themselves. Whether the instrument be saxophone or violin, a competent orchestra leader will still look for the best player available, regardless of organized parochialism.

One of the many differences between commercialized sunset concerts, and those which the city so greatly enjoyed last summer, would be that the purely commercial operator would be far less tolerant of trade-union sabotage than has been the case with the management of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Pensions Vs. Social Security.

The National Tribune, founded 60 years ago as the official organ of the G. A. R., has launched a campaign to secure pensions for all veterans who become disabled because of age or other infirmities, whether or not service-connected. Although general pensions are far from "inevitable," as the National Tribune believes, it has long been certain that a determined drive would be made to extend pension benefits as soon as Congress voted cash payment of the bonus. Indeed, every concession made to the veterans' demands has been an encouragement to fresh exactions.

Having granted subsidies to able-bodied men merely because they served in the country's armed forces, Congress has seriously weakened its logical defenses against a future pension raid. However, experience has shown that arguments based on general principles are seldom strong enough to prevail against the selfish demands of organized minorities able to put fear in the hearts of timid legislators. Consequently, it is of little use to point out that the Government has been ultra-liberal in its treatment of disabled service men and has stretched definitions of service-connected disability past the limits of credulity.

As this drive begins, however, there is one check upon pension grabbing activities, lacking heretofore, that will turn the scales in favor of taxpayers. That is found in the social security act, which inaugurates a comprehensive system of old-age insurance, embracing veterans as well as other employed persons. The Federal Government is also preparing to spend large sums in supplementing the non-contributory pensions which many States are now paying to the needy aged.

With all these new arrangements for taking care of the old and infirm, it would be frankly ludicrous as well as unjust to demand additional pensions for former service men whose needs are no greater than those of thousands who make no claim to special consideration.

Patchwork Is No Solution.

The celerity with which the House rushed the tax bill to final passage is made the subject of much caustic comment. However, in the absence of an opposition strong enough to have substantially modified or defeated the measure, the House was virtually compelled to "rubber stamp" the work of its Ways and Means Committee. The floor of the House, or for that matter the Senate, is not the proper place for extensive rewriting of tax bills or other complicated legislative proposals. The power to amend has to be exercised sparingly and intelligently to avoid destroying or seriously impairing the work of committees in shaping legislation.

Whether a committee is engaged in revising banking laws, preparing for the regulation of holding companies, devising plans for relief of unemployment, or engaged in other tasks calling for technical knowledge, the resultant legislative program ought to be accepted or rejected with only restricted exercise of the right to amend. Generally speaking, debate on the floor of either the House or Senate should be devoted to a discussion of the basic merits of proposed legislation and elucidation of obscure points therein.

In the present case, such a sensible and responsible method of procedure has been impossible. Under Administrative pressure a subservient majority on the Ways and Means Committee has reported out a totally undigested tax bill without giving it the careful study and deliberate consideration the subject so richly deserves. The unprepared House could not have been expected to discuss the measure intelligently. All it could do was to choose between blind acceptance or equally blind rejection of the committee's recommendations. So, responding to the pressure from Administration leaders, it has docilely voted approval of a bill that would introduce confusion and uncertainty into our present tax system without assuring substantial additions to revenue.

Under our party system of government we cannot, of course, expect that our tax laws will be free from any suggestion of partisan origin. But it is essential to protest when party affiliations become the chief determinant of the fate of important revenue measures. Members of Congress cannot pass independent judgment upon the innumerable matters on which they have to vote. They should be able to rely upon the opinions of better-informed colleagues charged with the task of drafting measures in committee. There is no evidence that the vote on the House tax bill was influenced by such intelligent guidance. On the contrary, it is simply a testimonial to the strength of an unintelligent party discipline which smacks more of dictatorship than democracy.

The action of the House emphasizes the need for Senatorial clarification and simplification of this legislative monstrosity. Perhaps the Secretary of the Treasury, who has shown such singular reluctance to elucidate or defend the Administration's program, will throw some light into the many obscure corners when he testifies before the Senate Finance Committee today.

Growing Financial Anarchy.

Between the preliminary French voting last Sunday and the run-off election on May 3, the Polish zloty has joined the ranks of managed currencies and Germany has appointed a new economic and financial dictator. Together with the leftist trend of the balloting in France, these events have contributed to world-wide reactions in securities markets. This is natural, for their combined effect is to emphasize the growing international financial anarchy.

Poland's new gold embargo and rigid foreign exchange control represent an important defection from the group of countries which have tied their currencies to the French franc. Coming at this particular time the move is certain to carry psychological repercussions into France, to say nothing of Belgium, Switzerland and the Netherlands. The move may have temporary beneficial effects within Poland, but from the viewpoint of international trade and recovery as a whole, it is a backward step.

The implications of Hermann Goering's elevation to the post of dictator over economic and financial policies in Germany seem equally reactionary. The appointment is a direct outcome of the bitter controversy between Dr. Hjalmar Schacht and the Nazi radicals, who wish to see German self-sufficiency intensified, even if the attempt leads to another currency breakdown. Possibly the subordination of Dr. Schacht represents an attempt to work out a compromise which will avert progressive nationalization of German industry. The reaction of the minister of economics to his dethronement will itself furnish explanation of the situation. If he should endeavor to resign, a victory for the Socialist wing of the Nazi party would be indicated.

Although neither the Polish nor the German developments directly affect the ability of France to maintain the present gold parity of the franc, every new manifestation of financial instability in Europe makes it more difficult for the French government in power to secure support for sound money policies. For that reason, events in Berlin and Warsaw are likely to influence the outcome of the run-off election in France next Sunday. News that Poland has established a managed currency, and that formal devaluation of the mark looms as a possibility, will not assist those French groups endeavoring to sustain the deflationary policies required to defend the franc.

Up To The Puerto Ricans.

There is no element of surprise in Senator Tyding's announcement that the Puerto Rican independence bill will not be pushed at this session. A measure of such importance should never be rushed through the legislative mill near the end of the last session before a Presidential election. Moreover, the bill already has served its chief purpose.

Puerto Ricans are thinking and talking of independence possibly more than they have ever done before. Many are opposed to the bill because they prefer to retain their American citizenship. Others are dissatisfied with the measure because it doesn't go far enough. Like some of the Filipinos, they would like to have immediate independence with American protection and no disruption of existing trade relations. From this exchange of opinions and the consequent debate the Puerto Ricans should clarify in their own minds the responsibilities as well as the advantages of independence. Then they will be in a better position to determine their future political status intelligently.

It is doubtful that the Administration hoped to accomplish anything more than a realistic discussion of independence problems when it sponsored the Tydings bill. Some groups in the islands have been clamoring for independence on the assumption that American sovereignty is tainted by imperialism. Unfortunately for propagandists, the bottom has been knocked out of that argument. If the majority of Puerto Ricans wish to risk the hazards of separate national existence, they may do so. The issue is in their hands.

Having thus shifted responsibility to the Puerto Ricans themselves, the Administration may well let the controversy simmer. Presumably those groups which are dissatisfied with the present bill will either concentrate upon improvements in the existing political system, or devise an independence measure of their own. In either event, a very complicated issue will receive examination of a practical character, and the island will presumably eventually acquire a government of its own choice. In the meantime Congress should certainly correct the grave defects in the island's election machinery.

Senator Luis Munoz-Marin, leader of the Liberal Party, insists that a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Puerto Rico be negotiated for ratification coincidental with an insular constitution. If such a treaty should be extensive enough to provide a market for Puerto Rico's cash crops, it would obviously leave the island economically dependent upon the United States. In such event, would the severance of political ties continue to be a reasonable proposition? If the Tydings bill merely induces the Puerto Ricans to consider this one problem realistically, it will have served a useful purpose.

Now Is The Time.

The rule requiring a two-thirds vote to nominate a Democratic candidate for the Presidency has been responsible for a great deal of internecine party strife and has resulted in the selection of many "dark horses." Moreover, when a determined minority has succeeded in preventing or holding up the nomination of a candidate favored by a majority of the delegates, the bargains and compromises effected to break the stalemate have often injured the party's chances of success in the coming campaign.

President Roosevelt, being certain of renomination, is therefore able to perform a signal service for his party by throwing the weight of his influence behind the movement to secure abolition of the two-thirds rule. Previous efforts looking in that direction have been thwarted by the suspicions and jealousies of contestants for the nomination and their supporters, who feared that the change would improve the chances of rivals.

Conditions at Philadelphia, however, will be ideal for breaking away from a tradition of very dubious value with the least possible friction. Nomination by majority would not only be good for the party, as the President states, but it would provide future safeguards against undue weight being given to sectional prejudices in the selection of a candidate. The fact that the strongest opposition to abrogation of the two-thirds rule is expected to come from the Southern States is itself an excellent argument in favor of the change.

An International Bridge.

From the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

While the United States has been bridging the Mississippi at New Orleans, the Hudson at New York and the Golden Gate at San Francisco, Europe also has been studying large-scale bridges, and several of these have international significance. One plan upon which considerable progress has been made calls for a 10-mile span.

Recently Peter Munch, foreign minister of Denmark, made formal denial of a report in a leading Swedish newspaper of a Berlin report that Germany, in the event of hostilities, would occupy Denmark as a "war pantry," using the ancient Schleswig dispute as a pretext. The report is said to persist, however, and now Copenhagen questions whether Denmark would gain by tying her capital to the European mainland, with all the risk that would imply.

Experimental Housing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read an article in a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post entitled, "The Government Builds Fifty Homes," and I was impressed with the accuracy of the diary.

If I am any judge of merit it is my opinion and the opinion of many others that the New Deal is muffing the best ball it has in its Resettlement "boondoggling" program. I have had an opportunity to visit the vicinity of a number of homestead communities and I find a contrary attitude on the part of the people to what such a movement should create. It is not because the people do not want something done, but it is because the people at the bossing end of this racket don't know anything about their job.

Washington sends out thrill-hunting women and callow youths without experience in any field which makes them doubly unfitted to deal with plain country people. In the first place, most of them could not lead any group of people, much less a group of long-suffering farmers and miners where a peculiar qualification in training and experience is needed.

They are told one thing this week and next week a young bespectacled emissary from Washington comes around and tells them the policy has been changed and if they expect to stay in the community they must accept the changed program. The first policy was they could buy the home in good old American fashion but the next policy was they must live in a communal-owned village on the Russian plan.

In the first place, the Government must cut out this playhouse foolishness and get down to sound business principles. In the second place, it must put people with experience and training on the job of building these communities and organizing the community life of the people.

From a political standpoint these projects are a bust. They will lose Roosevelt more votes than they will gain unless the trends change. If he would put in men with the background of training and experience with this type of people and change the thinking of the people in the communities and the surrounding neighborhood it would go a long way toward remedying the evils that exist today. Sending young embryonic brain-trusters to these projects fresh from some city university will destroy the chances of a desirable program of succeeding. As it stands today no political benefit will come to the New Deal and no social and economic benefit will come to the people.

W. M. YATES.
Huntington, W. Va., April 29.

In Defense Of Park Alterations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last year the daily papers contained almost as many letters concerning the work being done on the Mall as are now being published about the work on the smaller parks. Then, as now, "vandalism" was the favorite, much overworked word. Since then, it has become pretty obvious that most of the tumult and shouting was entirely uncalled-for.

In the first place, if there is one spot in the whole Unit ! States where formal and dignified treatment is appropriate it is that region which provides foreground and background for the National Capitol and the Lincoln and Washington monuments. Moreover, the land there is flat, and as different as possible from the lovely Rock Creek Park where, as in Montrose Park, the Commissioners have wisely left the rugged beauties of nature almost untouched. Washington is very fortunate in having these country parks so close to the heart of the city. No work has been done on them except to preserve them and to provide the necessary safety and comfort.

The downtown parks are another matter entirely. The chief need in the little triangles, circles and squares (the very shape of them is formal) is for benches and yet more benches, and for wide walkways where children on skates and scooters and in baby carriages can have space to move about freely. The wide streets around them give enough sense of spaciousness, and all that is needed is a bit of greenery and some restful shade—and plenty of benches.

It's just as well to remember that Washington is not New York. Here almost every house or apartment has a yard of some sort, even though it may be only pocket-handkerchief in size. Most of the streets are bordered with trees, there are no great skyscrapers to shut off the air, and there are still plenty of vacant lots.

As for Lafayette Park, with five imposing statues in the one square it seems more than incongruous to try to make it look like a country garden, especially as the beautiful vista of the White House grounds is provided just across the street. I fancy that the commissioners learned something last year when the Shrine convention overwhelmed the place.

Personally, I am such a fanatic about grass and trees that I would rather have a two-room cabin in a ten-acre plot than a mansion covering 50 feet and sharing a wall with the next mansion. But suitability for use is the chief thing to be remembered, and a good many mothers in the neighborhood of Eighteenth and Pennsylvania, for instance, would rather have a wide-open play space than a rustic grouping of shrubs and flowers that mustn't be touched. Having more regular playgrounds won't change the situation, either, because very young children, their mothers, elderly people, romantic couples, and just plain people still need the strolling places and the benches.

W. T. S.
Washington, April 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I felt that this controversy about the parks was exhausted but this morning's Post carries several more denunciations of the park renovations. It appears to me that some people would find fault with anything and everything, and when another change is made, they will harp on that, and so on down the line.

First of all, did anyone think that your so-called beautiful lawns and slopes were practically barren? After a period of years the grass is bound to die out in spots, and that which does not die is bound to be destroyed when most of our nature-loving public uses the seeded plots for cross-walks. Do you wonder why more sidewalks have to be laid? I have yet to see the time when a bit of seeded ground is left to turn green. It would take the entire police force to guard the seeded areas from most of our high-minded, public-spirited brethren. Many of them think nothing of cutting corners or taking shortcuts anywhere and everywhere.

As for replacing the walks in Franklin Park, they were an eyesore and needed to be replaced long ago. To anyone who has lived elsewhere for many years like myself, it is more noticeable than to those who have lived here all their life. Never have I seen such destruction of shrubbery and trees as I have observed in parks in this city. Yet, when a little improvement is undertaken, there is a hullahalloo set up which is ridiculous.

Just as the farmer plows his fields and adds new food for the grains and vegetables, so must our parks be rejuvenated periodically. After the fresh, rich soil is applied and new grass seed, shrubs and flowers planted, we will again enjoy the beauties about which there is so much lamentation.

The present condition is only temporary and the results will be well worth the time and expense involved. If the public will do their share, and preserve, rather than destroy, the growing things, it will be a long time before we need to undergo any reconstruction. Stop and consider that there is some worthy purpose behind everything. Here's hoping the much-needed replacements are finished promptly.

Student Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent death of William R. George of the George Junior Republic calls to mind that after the Good Government Clubs in New York (1894) with 10,000 members had elected Mayor Strong, immediately all hands were after jobs. They kept asking "What is there for us in this?"

The public schools had not given a glimmer of a citizen's duty in a democracy, when a bright light appeared in the Heavens in the George Junior Republic (1895) where boys and girls took on full responsibility for their government and, aided by a friendly hint here and there from "Daddy" George, developed character beyond the dreams of the ordinary martinet school teacher.

This showed the way. Could not the public schools in like manner develop character and teach democracy by practice?

President Eliot of Harvard, also president of the National Education Association, said:

Student self-government enforces positive activity; it appeals steadily to motives in the boys which will serve them when they become men; and it is constantly trying to develop in the boyish community the capacity of self-government. Therefore, I say it is based on sound educational principles.

The National Self-Government Committee, organized to keep ablaze this light kindled by Daddy George, today lists 4,000 schools all the way from the Atlantic to the Pacific using self-government to educate boys and girls for alert citizenship.

National Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whether or not a majority of the entire electorate is also convinced that politics and relief are inextricably mixed, as revealed by the recent poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion, I believe the Federal system is the best method yet devised for handling this gigantic business.

Let those who think otherwise, i. e.: that the interests of both the taxpayers and the millions dependent on relief can better be served by States, counties and municipalities, turn their attention to what has happened in New Jersey. It is conceivable that such governmental agencies would have closer contact with recipients of relief and spread the money over a larger number of families, but when local relief treasuries run dry because State legislators balk at passing taxes to fill them, the Federal Government has to step in.

Although the greatest number of relief clients are found in 11 States, this is no reason why the burden should not be borne by the Nation as a whole. The Administration is already committed on this vital problem and the welfare of the entire country makes it certain that in one form or another the Federal Government must continue to appropriate and disburse relief money.

Not Angry At Future Vets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was an alternate unable to attend the D. A. R. Congress and my very kind vice regent bought many copies of your splendid paper so that I could read all the congress' events. Interested as I was, it was the articles on Veterans of Future Wars that held my attention, associated closely as I am with our disabled veterans, our Gold Star Mothers and our Navy.

I have naturally been incensed by this organization, but please accept my gratitude for showing photographs of these young men. Have you ever seen the original "Spirit of '76"? Compare it with the faces of the burlesque in your paper.

I have walked with our flag, and on one side a boy on crutches, on the other one who was sightless. Look at the faces of our boys in the Army, Navy and Marines, and then look at the Future Veterans, as they call themselves. My anger has died down; these young men are only true to type. I must not expect from them what the flower of American manhood has given and will still give for the glory of our flag.

The Post Impressionist

Yesterday's Charmer.

Post Office, Thursday.

WHAT'S Anna Held like, as she is shown in the new film about Florenz Ziegfeld? This columnist hasn't had time to see that show—yet. But he is curious as to whether Miss Held's pictured specter wins anything like the applause once won by the reality?

Anna Held was—in her day—the most popular of stage personages—in her field. Yet she wasn't a richly talented singer. She wasn't pretty. She was by no means a great comedienne.

Not that her voice was quite bad. It was merely commonplace. She had the notes of the typical cabaret-artist common to Paris before there were any so-called cabarets in New York—long before there were any of them in other American cities.

Her voice was throaty and of mediocre range.

About her looks:

Once upon a time, your destined Post-Impressionist was assigned to interview her. It was early morning, by Theatrical Daylight-Saving Time: Say about 1 p. m. And kimonoed Miss Held had just risen from her bed. And she wore no make-up save such as remained from the night before—if any.

She was not pretty.

As for her acting:

Her comedy consisted solely of contrast—the contrast produced when an at first seemingly super-innocent child says something which doesn't belong even on the lips of a sophisticated adult—a child whose innocence you necessarily begin to doubt, yet are never quite ready to deny. Anna Held achieved this by a face capable of remaining infantile, by a foreign accent deliberately emphasized, by a minimum of gesture that could nevertheless convey a maximum of suggestion, and by a considerable rolling of the eyes.

Hers were prominent eyes, almost protuberant—what some of her compatriots name les yeaux saillants. The French still admire this characteristic, just as they used to admire eyebrows that meet above the nose—as you'll recall from Flauber's "Mme Bovary." Although protuberant eyes had seldom been loved over here in America, Miss Held's were soon welcomed.

So she made them misbehave.

And that is the key to the secret of a triumph which endured, from the night she emerged out of the background of a trifling operetta along about 1895, almost until the day of her death amid the all-obliterating smoke of the World War. The key to the secret: but, even with it in your possession, you won't achieve a complete solution unless you lived through at least the end of the Held Epoch—or, like Mark Twain's Connecticut Yankee, can be happily hit on the head and carried backward by the counter-currents of Time.

We've said that Anna Held lacked several of the qualities which helped so many other musical-comedy actresses to stardom. We should have added that, quite apart from the quality of her popular appeal, she did possess a quite personal charm. Since, however, we have been speaking of innocence, we must add that what she capitalized was the prewar period's infinite capacity to be shocked—and she possessed a press agent who must have been a master in his realization of this capacity, in supplying the demand.

If not by that press agent, then by some imp of golden perversity, the most incredible stories were told of her wickedness—"naughtiness" was then the word. And they were believed.

They couldn't be too incredible. The public's appetite, not to say digestion, grew "by what it fed on." There were Anna Held jokes, just as there were soon to be Ford jokes—or another type. Anna Held was acclaimed a sort of timeless and merry Cleopatra-Poppea—a living woman, but a living legend.

And yet the legend was quite untrue.

Those who knew her best knew that she was an uninspired, industrious woman, thriftily determined never, by opening her lips in denial, to sacrifice her income to her reputation.

The Held tradition was best exemplified by something a Philadelphia hotel manager told us. At noon Miss Held had telegraphed from New York; she would arrive at 3 and wanted a suite of rooms reserved. The only adequate suite was that just surrendered by one of the Booths—Evangeline, we believe.

"In those few intervening hours," the hotel-manager proudly whispered, "I had a gang of paper-hangers appropriately repaper those rooms—changing dove-grey to crimson."

Wouldn't baby-blue have been—really—more appropriate still?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

"Tammany" Is Dead.

We will have to rip an interesting page out of the real American Who's Who now that Tammany Young is dead. This Who's Who is not an actual book but a sort of unwritten directory of interesting characters—a word-of-mouth record of unusual people who adorned their sphere and time in the United States.

Tammany Young was famous as a gate-crashers, but in the last half-dozen years or so he had been an actor in the movies and before that had made occasional appearances in the drama on Broadway, usually in small tough-guy roles. He wasn't much of an actor, but good enough. His prowess as a gate-crasher was exaggerated, too, because, to tell the truth about him, he often walked in on a pass or on the friendly nod of the man at the gate.

What was his real talent, then? Well, it wasn't exactly a talent that made him a passing celebrity on Broadway, at the ringside and on the sport pages. It was the art or character that he maintained. He set out to make a career as a personality and public figure and succeeded without resorting to dirty work.

• • • •

Tammany was the New York cockney. He hooked his conversation out of the corners of his mouth, he wore his hat cocked over one eye and he looked the part of a very tough guy. In his private existence, however, he was a religious churchgoing Catholic, a man of decent behavior, kind and thoughtful toward others and a man of peace. In the last few years he was the dead spit of Irvin S. Cobb, reduced from two columns to one. I doubt that Tammany ever had a fight. I doubt also that he ever held more $100, free and clear, but though he was strictly a hand-to-mouth man, broke more often than not because of the jerky tenure of employment in the drama, he never whined or lost his grip.

Tam had been a sport department copy boy as a child and left journalism to enter the domestic service of the late Wilson Mizner, the adventurer, when Mizner, in a weak moment, married an elderly and fabulously rich widow. On the wedding day Mizner bought Tam a plum-colored flunky's uniform with brass buttons down the front and instructed him to sit below stairs in the bride's mansion until he rang for him in the morning. Tammany was then to bring Mr. Mizner's coffee to the bedside on a silver tray.

On his first and last day at this work Tammany sat in the pantry until 11 a. m. At last the summons came, and Tam grabbed his tray and rushed upstairs. Entering the bridal chamber, Mr. Young stopped dead in the doorway and surveyed the room with an awestruck gaze. There were gilt cupids and brocaded draperies as stiff as sheet iron, the rug was almost knee deep and Mr. Mizner and his bride were sitting up in bed as gaudy as a Coney Island merry-go-round.

"By God, Bill," Tammany Young exclaimed, "what a place for a hop joint!"

The bride found instant fault with Tammany's manner, so he departed, but Mizner soon departed, too; so probably there was no future in the job, anyway.

Tam first broke into print in the sport pages. He liked to hang around the press coop at the Polo Grounds, and the baseball men used him as a stooge for many quaint observations about the athletes. The Polo Grounds press box—or pest box, as it was called in those days—was always crowded with actors and producers, often to the exclusion of working journalists. Tammany was not at all servile, but he was an obliging little hustler and he was constantly scurrying around the plant finding chairs or soft drink crates for his friends to sit on. The writers liked him and mentioned him in print so often that he became a minor celebrity in town, and the theatrical people grew fond of him, too.

Of course, he did crash many gates at first nights, big fights and football games in his early years, but his range of acquaintance among theatrical and sporting people widened so rapidly that pretty soon he was a welcome guest. Tex Rickard generally passed him into his greatest productions without question, and Flo Ziegfeld also regarded him as good atmosphere on a gala night.

• • • •

I am sorry I will never have a chance to tell Mr. Young about a crash which would have commanded his admiration. That was my feat of crashing the gate at the lying in state of his late Majesty King George V in London a few months ago.

But probably by now Tammany has walked through a tougher gate than that with an airy wave of his hand. Still I don't think that would be a crash, either, on the basis of his conduct, private and public, as I knew him for almost 20 years. I judge that there again, as at Rickard's shows and Ziegfeld's openings, word was left at the gate to look out for Tammany Young and bid him welcome.

West Virginia Asks $1,000,000 From WPA

A $1,000,000 new building program for West Virginia State institutions was submitted yesterday to Federal officials with the indorsement of the State's Congressional delegation, according to the Associated Press.

The money, if allocated, would be used for construction of new units at tuberculosis sanitariums, the State industrial home for girls and college dormitories.

James A. Chambers, president of the State board of control, said after conferences with WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins that he was confident the funds would be forthcoming out of the new proposed $1,600,000,000 bill now pending before Congress.

Chamber Told Industry Kept Labor at Loss

der, factual address was interpreted by informed sources as a direct answer to Administration insistence that the responsibility for the continued delay in solving the unemployment program lay on business' unwillingness to share the load.

Sweet's answer placed the responsibility squarely back on the shoulders of the Administration, observers pointed out.

Longer Hours Charged.

Even as the chamber leaders were refuting the Administration spokesmen who have demanded that business and industry absorb more of the unemployed or face higher taxation for mounting relief costs, an American Federation of Labor statement pointed out that "little or no progress has been made in re-employment this year."

The Federation said gains in employment have not kept pace with business gains, asserting "more than 1,000,000 possible jobs have been eliminated by lengthening work hours since the termination of the NRA."

The statement continued with an analysis which said "the average work week has increased since January," adding that Federation estimates showed 12,184,000 persons still were without normal work in industry during March.

"Strait-jacket" Peril.

In response to the resolution adopted by the chamber's board of directors Monday, proposing a survey of re-employment possibilities in industry, President Peter Van Horn of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc., yesterday commended the survey idea and offered co-operation in a letter to Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

President Van Horn said that unless there is a change in present marketing conditions, "business and personal initiative will be in a strait jacket."

Speakers at the round table on industrial relations of the chamber, held yesterday in the Washington Hotel, included Sterling Morton, secretary of the Morton Salt Co., of Chicago, who made an address on "Limitations of Legislative Efforts to Improve Terms of Employment"; M. B. Folsom, treasurer of the Eastman Kodak Co., of Rochester, N. Y., who spoke on "The Social Security Act in Relation to Private Plans for Employes' Benefits," and Alexander Thomson, chairman of the Champion Paper and Fiber Co., of Hamilton, Ohio, whose address was titled "Accomplishments of Management in Advancing Employes' Interests."

Sea Bath Record Sought.

Folestone, England (U.P.).—Henry Bull, 60-year-old grocer, has not missed his early morning bath in the sea for nearly nine years. He is attempting to beat the record of 3,693 consecutive swims set up by a fellow tradesman, A. J. Camburn.

C. of C. Attacks Tax Bill

taxes which would "destroy the estates of the so-called well-to-do," assess larger incomes at rates amounting "almost to a capital levy," that it penalized corporations for size at "confiscatory" rates, and "ignored rights and needs of States."

"The Federal tax collector is again knocking at our doors. Five times since 1932 and we wonder what the end can be. Shall we cry out in despair 'O Lord, how long!'—and how much? Those in authority have little regard for the advice of those who spent a lifetime in responsible business service."

Mr. Clausen, raising his voice, then launched into a sweeping assault on the tax bill now before Congress, describing it as "fearful in its consequences and destructive of American business solvency . . . We demand of Congress that they stop, look and listen."

A member of the chamber's taxation committee, which appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee against the bill and which will appear next week before the Senate Finance Committee, Mr. Clausen outlined business objections to the new tax bill as follows:

That it does not "pretend" to balance the 1937 budget; that the plan will overturn the whole present structure of corporate taxation; that the plan has been rejected in countries with greater experience in the levying and collection of income taxes; that it will raise the peaks of Federal revenue in years of prosperity and deepen the valleys in years of depression; that it will favor the well-established corporations at the expense of "those struggling for a place in the sun;" that it will seriously depress the durable goods industry, and compel banks to deny credit in many instances.

Retard Competition.

In outlining approximately 30 serious objections to the measure, Mr. Clausen stressed that the bill would tend to retard the growth of competition and operate to aid, if not create, monopoly.

He then gave as the chamber's reasoned judgment on the bill that "the plan is so contrary to all accepted canons of taxation, would be so destructive of business progress and would so retard recovery and re-employment that were its contents and probable effects understood, public opinion would tolerate no further consideration of the measure."

He concluded by repeating his answer to the Administration's challege to business to restore employment to idle men as lying "in the hands of government itself."

The second speaker to lambast the Administration's tax program was Roy C. Osgood, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago, who reiterated the chamber's 1932 tax program as still applicable to today's needs.

Under it he included a balanced budget; reduction of Federal expenditures; new debt borrowings consonant with maintenance of Government credit, in decreasing amounts, to keep tax increases down; added taxation with a definite time limit; only moderate increases on individual incomes and on corporate taxes (at that time, when both were low), excise taxes at low rates on a broad range of articles of wide use, but not of first necessity, and an unchanged estate tax.

He said:

"Even after a lapse of four years it is clear that this tax and expenditure program was soundly conceived.

"Businessmen who fail to appreciate the degree of increase in Federal revenues do not realize that current receipts, even without the benefit of processing taxes, are running at an all-time peak, war years excepted.

"Deficits in early depression years were occasioned by decreased revenues, and deficits in the latter depression years represent increased expenditures. In 1932, Federal revenues were about $2,000,000,000; the deficit was about $3,000,000,000. In 1935 revenues were more than $4,000,000,000, yet the deficit again exceeded $3,000,000,000."

He attacked "duplicate taxation on corporate earnings affecting the stockholder, who is the real taxpayer," the "excessive heights" of surtax rates in individual incomes and estate tax rates" which "bear a social penalty aspect" and "discourage initiative and thrift."

Osgood, speaking quietly but effectively, pointed out that the tax legislators "have left open the widest gateway of escape through the use of Federal tax-exempt securities."

He said that stock and excess profits tax provisions of the 1935 measure "are so fantastic in character as to be little short of a lottery scheme." The whole measure he characterized as not only "inconsequential in revenue producing ability, but out of line with all sound plans of taxation."

On the pending tax bill Osgood repeated the criticisms of Clausen, adding that it was "utterly impracticable and unworkable."

Discusses Principle.

Then, shifting to a discussion of the Administration's attitude, which he charged "has bene more than adverse to taxpayers," he claimed that "responsible bureau officials have been denied the exercise of sound discretion and straightjacketed by inequitable general rules. The present attitude of the Treasury inclines to the levying of the maximum tax and asking the taxpayer what he is going to do about it."

After emphasizing that "No satisfactory program of taxation can be devised to meet the present scale of expenditures," Osgood went on to discuss the principle embodied in the pending bill of taxing undistributed net earnings, saying:

"Why should the time-honored virtue of saving for a rainy day suddenly become anti-social? . . . The logic of the pending legislation is running completely counter to the principles of the social security act."

In the first address of the general session yesterday R. C. Matthews, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, of Toronto, Canada, reminded the group of the close relationship and mutual dependence in some respects of the two nations. After emphasizing the common cultural backgrounds and fusion of international thought brought about by proximity, common language and beliefs, he urged:

"Nations must learn afresh to seek business, to find markets and to admit the products of other countries. The long agony of low prices and closed markets should come to an end."

Strawn Labels All Price-Fixing Bills 'Vultures'

Two Others at Chamber Round Table Advocate 'Only Modest Steps.'

After hearing an assertion that "all these price-fixing bills are vultures out of the same egg," by Silas H. Strawn, of the Chicago law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw, chairman of the round-table meeting on legislation affecting price-making, the group yesterday heard two speakers recommend only "a modest step" at this time by Congress in enactment of price-fixing measures.

Strawn, stipulating that lawyers naturally do not object to the present flood of law making, since it provides them with more business, added, however, "I'd rather be an obstetrician than a coroner. As a corporation lawyer, I'd prefer to keep bringing out new advances than to help bury defunct legislation."

He said:

"Businessmen who can remain sane and normal under the strain of the experimental and 'vote-fetching' legislation that has been introduced in Congress, especially during the past three years, are gifted by nature with unusually strong mentalities."

Quotes British Verse.

He then quoted a bit of doggerel written by A. P. Herbert, M. P. and English writer, as follows:

"Let's stop somebody from doing something,
Everybody does too much;
Some folks like to eat and drink
And bicycle and rink, and bathe and such;
So let's have a lot of little regulations,
Let's make laws, and jobs for our relations,
There's too much kissing at railway stations,
So let's find out what everyone wants to do,
And then stop them from doing it."

Despite Strawn's dryly bitter observations on Administration regulations affecting trade and industry, two speakers at the session, a group division of the United States Chamber of Commerce meeting, refrained from vigorous criticism of the anti-price-discrimination measures now in Congress.

Predicts Court Action.

One of them, Gilbert H. Montague, a New York City lawyer, pointed out that "none of these bills has originated with the President, nor has yet received his public indorsement." After outlining the fundamentals of the proposed legislation, he predicted that the new legislation would run afoul of the Supreme Court, unless it were religned to conform more closely with the court's recent Sugar Institute decision. He said:

"The philosophy of these price-discrimination and basing-point bills cannot be reconciled with the Supreme Court's conclusion in the Sugar Institute case that 'private negotiations are essential,' and that 'deprivation of opportunity to make special arrangements . . . tended in fact, as it naturally would tend, toward maintenance of price levels relatively high.'"

Further in his address he pointed out:

"These price-discrimination and basing-point laws might, if enacted, Volsteadize the antitrust laws and the Federal Trade Commission act. They might lay upon the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice a duty of enforcement as impossible to perform as was prohibition."

"Time Not Yet Come."

He was emphatic in asserting that "the time for these laws has not yet come."

Dr. Melvin T. Copeland, professor of marketing at the graduate school of business administration of Harvard University, discussing "Price Differences In Distribution," said, in urging that no great steps be taken to change the present laws:

"Let us not risk too greatly overloading a creaky administrative machine."

In the meantime, in the Senate, the Robinson anti-price-discrimination bill ran into Republican opposition briefly, but majority leaders were still confident it would be approved by a "2-to-1" vote.

At other group sessions speakers discussed the housing problem, an insurance program for business and natural resource policies.

In the first session Walter S. Schmidt, president of the Frederick A. Schmidt Co., of Cincinnati, spoke on "The Influence of City Planning in Promoting Construction." I. A. McLean, president of the Southern Trust Co., of Louisville, Ky., discussed "The Relationship of Home Financing to Construction," and Charles F. Lewis, director of the Buhl Foundation of Pittsburgh, spoke on "Development and Protection of Neighborhoods in the Modern City."

Mrs. Hewitt Balks Coast Extradition

Trenton, N. J., April 29 (A.P.).—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman today denied the request of California authorities for extradition of Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt on mayhem charges growing out of the alleged sterilization of her daughter, Ann.

The Governor observed that Mrs. Hewitt, ill in a Jersey City hospital, had been arrested by the sheriff of Hudson County April 9 on a chancery court order demanding an accounting of the estate of the late Peter Cooper Hewitt, father of the young woman.

Hoffman also pointed out Mrs. Hewitt is charged with attempting to commit suicide in Jersey City on February 22 last.

Former Spanish Queen Denies Alfonso Reunion

Paris, April 29 (U.P.).—The former Queen Victoria of Spain today refused to make up with former King Alfonso.

"No throne, no reconciliation," she said in effect, spiking rumors of an impending reunion in the exiled Spanish royal family.

Her recent majesty indicated that if the revolution had not ousted the monarchy from Spain the King and Queen, to outward appearances, would have remained a happily married couple. But since the marriage was not a happy one, the former Queen no longer thinks it necessary to put on front.

She said she is perfectly happy living quietly at Fontainebleau and hopes that the former King is as happy in his exile in Rome.

House Passes Bill to Reform Corporate Tax

Opposition of Republicans Is Overridden by Vote of 267 to 93.

sulting from deferred declarations of dividends. This was done by making the corporate dividend year correspond to the taxable year.

12-Month Distribution.

In other words, corporations must distribute their earnings during the 12 months in which they were earned, if they are to obtain a credit for dividend payments.

The bill as passed carried two other committee amendments. The first provided additional relief for corporations lacking accumulated earnings and profits to distribute taxable dividends equal to the net income at the close of the year, even though they had an adjusted net income. Instead of a 22½ per cent tax in such cases, the amendment provided a 15 per cent levy on the part of earnings used in covering a prior deficit, after accumulated earnings and profits had been applied to the deficit. Still another amendment defined a foreign corporation deriving income from within the United States to mean a corporation receiving 85 per cent of its income from domestic sources, instead of 75 per cent, as the bill formerly provided.

Numerous other so-called "cushions" were carried in the bill as drawn up by the committee and finally passed by the House. They included 22½ per cent preferential flat rates conditionally applicable to so-called debt-ridden corporations, favored treatment for banks and insurance companies, and preferential rates on non-resident corporations and individuals.

So complex is the measure that the Senate Finance Committee has been "going to school" to prepare itself for more detailed consideration. Closed meetings have been held, with Treasury tax experts as schoolmasters. Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, calls them "dress rehearsals."

Testimony Today.

The committee's first public appearance on the bill will be this morning, when Secretary Morgenthau, Commissioner Helvering and George C. Haas, Treasury director of research and statistics, testify on the bill for the record.

The bill is scheduled for its first real Senate panning tomorrow, when M. L. Seidman, chairman of the taxation committee of the New York Board of Trade, leads a processing of witnesses before the committee.

Hearings will be continued through Saturday, and on Monday at least four representatives of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who told a House committee that the bill was unsound, unworkable and unproductive of revenue, will appear. Working at posthaste, committee members said, hearings cannot be completed and the bill prepared for the floor before May 15.

There was little reason to believe that the bill will be broadened to include processing taxes, sidetracked by the House, although hearings may be held on the proposed farm levies as the Senate scouts out every possible source of revenue to restore to the bill the full amount of revenue asked by the President.

Over the first three-year period, the House measure is estimated to fall $334,000,000 short. At least two amendments are being prepared—one by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., Wisconsin Progressive, and the other by Senator William H. King, Utah Democrat—to raise additional revenue from individual income sources.

Dillinger Informer Sails for Rumania

New York, April 29 (A.P.).—Mrs. Anna Sage, the "Woman in Red" in the Dillinger case, was deported to Rumania today.

On board the President Harding, the 44-year-old brunette who decoyed John Dillinger to his death, said she had no regrets for anything that had happened.

She told how she had pointed out Dillinger to the Federal agents and said she had received $5,000 for informing.

Bandit Faces Murder Charge as Victim Dies

Staunton, Va., April 29 (A.P.).—W. H. Riddle, Barren Ridge storekeeper, shot Saturday night when he resisted a bandit, died of his wounds here last night.

County officers prepared to place a charge of first-degree murder against Sylvia E. Huffman, farm laborer, of Harriston. Huffman was arrested Sunday.

The storekeeper was shot when he answered a command to "stick 'em up" by reaching for his own pistol.

Features of Tax Bill

High Points in the Administration's tax bill passed yesterday by the House

Graduate taxes on corporate earnings, in proportion to dividends withheld from distribution. Rate schedule from 1 to 29.5 per cent for small corporations earning less than $10,000. Steep scale from 4 to 42.5 per cent for high-bracket corporations. Intermediate rates for companies earning between $10,000 and $40,000. Estimated yield, $591,000,000 the first year.

Imposes normal 4 per cent income tax on dividends received by shareholders.

Repeals present corporation income tax of 12½ to 15 per cent. Extend another six months capital stock and excess profits taxes, with the capital stock tax reduced from $1.40 to 70 cents per $1,000. Claimed yield, $83,000,000.

Imposes 80 per cent "windfall tax" on profits of corporations which received processing tax refunds following AAA invalidation, or did not pay tax. Designed to yield $100,000,000.

Orders $35,000,000 refund of taxes imposed on floor stocks when AAA was invalidated. Refunds taxes imposed on processed commodities either exported or sold to tax-exempt institutions.

Blocks declaration of stock dividends to escape taxation. To prevent revenue "lag," requires corporations to distribute earnings during year in which earned.

Concerns with large outstanding debts, corporations with insufficient income to cover deficits, and companies in receivership, would be taxed at a preferential flat rate on part of their income.

Special 15 per cent flat rate for domestic banks, trust and insurance companies.

Nazimova Will Head Stars of New Playbills

Noted Actress to Be Seen in 'Ghosts' Against Strong Film Bills.

One of the highlights of the current drama season will be offered in the National Theater for the week beginning next Monday night, May 4, when Mme. Alla Nazimova in Henrik Ibsen's play of "Ghosts" will be the attraction. This has proved one of the outstanding successes of the year, both in New York and on an extensive road tour that has awakened audiences of the hinterland to the highest pitches of enthusiasm. Nazimova's portrayal of the character of Mrs. Alving has been acclaimed the crowning achievement of her career of 30 years in the American theater. In her support will be seen such distinguished artists as McKay Morris, Harry Ellerby, Beatrice de Neegaard and Raymond O'Brien. The star staged the play and the settings were designed by Stewart Chaney. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The box-office seat sale opens this morning.

Loretta Young and Franchot Tone are the pictured stars of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of Ladislaus Fodor's play of "The Unguarded Hour," to be shown as chief screen features for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater. In leading supporting roles in this mystifying story of murder and trial in London appear Lewis S. Stone, Roland Young, Jessie Ralph, E. E. Clive, Henry Daniell and others of note. The production is a handsome one. The stage entertainment will be supplied by Rudy Valee and his Connecticut Yankees, with assisting specialty artists, in his "Punch Bowl Revue," an elaborate offering of variegated content.

Bette Davis comes to the screen of the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "The Golden Arrow," the first picture in which she has appeared since winning the Academy award for the best feminine acting of 1935. Opposite her will appear George Brent, with Carol Hughes, Eugene Pallette, Dick Foran, Catherine Doucet and Craig Reynolds in contributory roles. The stage portion of the bill will be supplied by another of Maj. Edward Bowes' Amateurs on Tour. This unit of the Bowes proteges is said to represent an especially selected "pick of the crop" and to afford the most diversified entertainment of any on the road.

"The Witness Chair" is the title of the new vehicle in which Ann Harding, supported by Walter Abel, will occupy the screen at the RKO-Keith Theater for the week beginning this morning. The story of this picture is said to possess all of the dramatic power and thrill of "The Trial of Mary Dugan," plus qualities of its own that have not before been paralleled in a screen drama of this character. Douglas Dumbrille, Frances Sage, Moroni Olsen, William Benedict and Margaret Hamilton are prominent in the cast.

Executed entirely in Technicolor, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," a new screen version of the famous John Fox, jr., novel and play of the same name, will mark a new development in outdoor drama on the silver sheet at Loew's Palace Theater beginning tomorrow. In the principal roles will be seen Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Fred MacMurray, Fred Stone and others. This melodramatic story of the mountain feud country is one of the homely classics of the past quarter-century and, photographed wholly in natural color, should afford an unusual bit of cinematographic diversion.

With capacity audiences the rule continuously since the opening of the picture last Friday night, "Ecstasy" will enter its second week on the screen of the Belasco Theater this week-end. The subject of much controversy before its admission for public exhibition in this country, this Czechoslovakian production, starring Hedy Kiesler, has proved a sensation and not a subject for censorial interference.

Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, Douglas Dumbrille, Lionel Stander, H. B. Warner, John Wray, Margaret Seddon, George Bancroft and their numerous associates will continue through a second week of the extended run of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater, where it has perpetuated the overflow business attracted during its first downtown week at the Earle. One of the most engaging comedy-dramas of the season, it de-

Nelson B. Bell

About The Showshops

"THE TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE." As one whose advocacy of the use of color as an aid to dramatic effect in "Becky Sharp" was ardent and insistent, I find it a gratifying duty to report that the employment of a perfected Technicolor, multiple-tone process of natural-color photography throughout the length of this splendid Paramount picturization of the famous old novel and stage play by John Fox, jr., cannot be looked upon otherwise than as a long step forward in the direction of the screen's complete realism.

NELSON B. BELL.

It is a totally different quality of color application from any heretofore seen that is encountered in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"—the first outdoor melodrama, by the way, ever to be so treated. Except in the fire scenes, the unnatural vividness of tints that was so evident in "Becky Sharp" is nonexistent in this film. Occasfonally the flames of the burning camp seem a little redder than they should be, but in the long shots in the open mountain country and in the use of flesh tints there is a modified and subdued beauty that comes very close, indeed, to actuality.

The silver sheet has not to date reflected anything so entrancingly beautiful as the rugged scenery of the mountainous feud country mirrored in the placid surface of a blue lake pitched high in the hills. So skillfully have these scenes been photographed in the normal hues of nature that distance has been lent almost the depth and reality of a fourth-dimensional medium. The sharp definition of foreground objects and the lazy blue haze of the distant mountains have been achieved with an accuracy and fidelity that are as true as life itself.

Another factor in the gradual refinement of a photographic process that must eventually become of universal use is the elimination of the "flicker" caused by imperfect "tracking" of the colors. No longer are there any obtrusive flashes of solid reds, blues and yellows to mar the illusion of a literal translation of nature to the screen.

Thus it comes about that "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" takes rank as the first of the color subjects which makes pigmentation an actual, as well as theoretical, dramatic asset and employs it as an integral part of its dramatic structure rather than as a mere exploitation aid and source of an additional foundation for "sales talk."

• • • •

It is interesting to note that the present production marks the third utilization Paramount has made of the John Fox story as a basis of camera drama. The first was in 1916, the second in 1923. Both, of course, were silent pictures. In this most recent and infinitely best picturization of the famous old tale of mountain feudists, the encroachment of "furriners" and the eventual supremacy of "civilization," in the form of a sort of voluntary law and order, the producers have declined to establish any definite locale of their action. It seems to be in the hills of Kentucky, thus violating the integrity of the lyrics of that popular song, prompted by the success of the play, which, you will remember, specifically designate the place as "In the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, on the trail of the lonesome pine, etc." This will come as a bit of a blow to Washington.

• • • •

Washington, whether your memory goes back that far or not, it always seemed to me, took an especial interest in the dramatic version of this story of warfare between the Tollivers and the Falins, slumbering ambition, romance and tragedy because its colorful events all seemed to take place practically in the Capital's back yard. There are other considerations, too, that have served to endear this exciting play to the local theatergoing heart.

The original stage production was participated in by many who were at the time, or immediately became, Washington favorites—the late Theodore Roberts, as Judd Toliver; Charlotte Walker, Willard Robertson, Warner Richmond and one or two others of lesser note.

Charlotte Walker was one of the most beloved of all the leading women the old Columbia Players ever had, the Columbia Players, in turn, being an organization that occupies an important chapter in the history of stock companies in the National Capital. She was the wife of Eugene Walter, celebrated playwright, and is the mother of Sara Haden, the gifted young character actress, who appeared as the truant officer with Shirley Temple in "Captain January."

Willard Robertson, the Guy Pollock in "I Married a Doctor," currently on the screen at the Earle, was a member of the original "Trail" cast and later made his home in Washington, where he graduated in law and, for a time, served as an attorney-examiner with the Interstate Commerce Commission. The smell of grease paint overcoming that of cinders and soft-coal smoke, he returned in time to his first love, the stage, and then gravitated naturally into pictures.

Warner Richmond had much the same experience, minus the law. He has been rather in eclipse in Hollywood of late years because on a certain occasion he had the temerity to "talk back" to Director Michael Curtiz under circumstances which he thought warranted it.

Theodore Roberts, of course, is best remembered not for his work as the French Canuck in the stage version of Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Right of Way," or his Judd Tolliver in "The Trail," but by virtue of his association on the screen with the late Wallace Reid in the most popular series of comedy-romances that gifted young star ever made. He was "the grand old man of the screen" in his era, was Roberts.

These are only a few of the memories that will be awakened by "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" when that superlatively excellent picture opens on the screen at the Palace tomorrow.

• • • •

It is an odd coincidence that brings a bulletin from the Hilda Spong Players, 9 East Fifty-ninth street, New York, on the same afternoon as the preview screening of "The Trail" for the drama desks. The Hilda Spong Players, it seems, launch a ten-week season of stock in the Playhouse at Cape May, N. J., on Thursday, July 2, and are now busy reading original new scripts to augment the three new plays they already have included in their season's plans. Hilda Spong was one of the sterling actresses who, in company with Wilton Lackaye, Charlotte Walker and others of conspicuous attainment in the theater, helped make the old Columbia Players one of the most famous stock companies in the United States.

Power-of-Example Note.

They never should have tampered with those clocks in the interest of daylight saving last Sunday. If they hadn't, it might never have occurred to me to set mine back 25 years or so in the interest of some fragrant recollections of the playhouse.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, April 29.

Fredric March, while strolling across the 20th Century-Fox Studio, stops to say that he believed he saw a movie boner in the flicker "Desire." Marlene Dietrich appears at the Spanish hotel in San Sebastian with plenty of fluffy dresses, hats, lingerie and other articles. It certainly was wonderful to get those heavily fur-bordered lounge robes into that suitcase with hats, evening gowns, etc.

Florence Rice.

March comments that he has completed two pictures, and Dietrich can look for him in movie boners.

Barbara Stanwick says that when she saw the flicker "Strike Me Pink," she believes Eddie Cantor received a telegram from a Western Union messenger. But when Eddie opened the telegram, it was a letter written in ink.

Arthur Schwartz stops composing the score for the musical version of "The Mark of Zorro" to tell about a movie boner in the flicker "The Great Ziegfeld." William Powell, playing Ziegfeld, tells Patricia about the circus, and the next flash is the "circus number," with Harriet Hoctor. Powell stands at the rear of the theater talking to Myrna Loy, portraying Billie Burke, and Patricia, who are sitting in the last row of the orchestra. Ziegfeld's hair in this scene has become very gray, but Patricia is no bigger or older.

Everyone is looking for movie boners. Shirley Temple has promised that she will try to find one in the next picture she sees.

• • • •

Now for the fans and the boners they found. "I wish," writes Georgia Childs, "that the movies would give the Automat a break. Three pictures, which I have seen, contained scenes supposedly taking place in this eating place, and each had glaring errors. I've been eating in the Automat on Broadway for longer than I expected, and I've yet to see white-topped tables. But the thing that annoyed this little gal more than anything else was where they had the coffee, the champagne of the rehearsal kids. It was placed in an obscure corner. The movie executives and the directors ought to visit the Automat when they're in New York and learn something. The coffee slot is always displayed prominently. Tell Miss Garbo I'd like her autograph. And tell me about James Stewart. If he's married I'll stop believing in all men."

In the flicker "Don't Gamble With Love," claims Dave Brokowsky, "there is a scene in which Bruce Cabot is selling his gambling club to Irving Pichel, and when he signs the agreement you can plainly see him cross the t's in his name. In the picture his name is Jerry Edwards, and it hasn't any t's in it."

Charles Bickford, in the flicker "Pride of the Marines," is seen giving his wrist watch to the little boy mascot of the Marines. Yet, in the next scene, according to Walter Habelt, Bickford is talking to Florence Rice and it is clearly evident that he is wearing the same wrist watch.

• • • •

When Caesar Romero and the "Countess" take the ship for Japan via Honolulu, in the flicker "Love Before Breakfast," they embark New York. "The ships in this run," writes Edward Wacha, "accommodate only 12 passengers, and I saw more than that many people represented on the screen. I got the impression that the vessel shown in the picture was the Chichibu Maru, which is a 17,000-ton liner sailing out of San Francisco. Furthermore, there is no steamship line which has a direct service between New York and Honolulu without stops en route, as the movie would infer—especially not with the size ships shown. The author and director apparently overlooked the Panama Canal.

"They should have made use of either a transcontinental air line, or the service of the Dollar Line out of New York. Else they should have had the action in California."

"You've probably guessed it by now," says Mr. Wacha, "I'm a steamship company employe, and I know where ships go." Which proves again that everyone finds flicker flaws when the movies depict his trade.

In the flicker "The Milky Way," Helen Mack attempts to stop the fight between Harold Lloyd and William Gargan. Miss Mack runs around the corner for a policeman and not only brings one back but does it in less than a minute. According to James Hill, who insists that he knows his New York, this is a movie boner.

Tiny Singer With Titan's Voice

When the new unit of Maj. Edward Bowes' Amateurs on Tour appears on the stage of the Earle Theater tomorrow, one of the aspirants for favor will be Dorothy Bows, soprano, said to be a Washingtonian known here as Dorothy Davenport, of 1116 Ninth street. Miss Bows' claim to distinction lies in the possession of a voice of such range as to be capable of reaching the "D" above "C" in altissimo—a feat in vocalization believed never before to have been achieved. Miss Bows is pictured above with Maj. Bowes, who is rushing her back to the Capital to appear with his troupe booked here for the week.

Difficult Play Is Well Acted By Local Group

"HOTEL UNIVERSE." The King-Smith School presents the drama in one act by Philip Barry, directed by William Whitehead, with stage setting by Hugo Anden. At The Playhouse April 29 and 30. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Pat Ferry.....Vernon Knight
Lily Malone.....Barbara Fallon
Hope Ames.....Patricia Smith
Alice Kendall.....Helen Fish
Tom Ames.....Carl Christianson
Ann Field.....Winifred Dewey
Norman Rose.....Raymond Casford
Felix.....George Farrington
Stephen Field.....Poraej Reese

Displaying no less courage in essaying it than the author showed in first writing it, the students of the King-Smith School last evening presented the evening-long, one-act play of Philip Barry, "Hotel Universe," turning in a superlative performance which, despite the extremely philosophical verbosity of the play, was keyed and played at an entirely fascinating pitch.

Only twice in recent years has an author dared to write for an uninterrupted evening of drama (George M. Cohan's "Pigeons and People" is the other entry) and such a rarity would seem to present difficulties not easily overcome by any but highly skilled professional actors. Under the direction of William Whitehead, however, the players took hold of the work and presented a performance unique in the annals of local amateur and semi-professional production.

Superbly cast and presented with professional precision, "Hotel Universe" ran its complicated course with amazing ease, intertwining threads of individual pasts with threads of the present, weaving thereby a pattern which, while not exactly prophetic, nevertheless is indicative of future trends.

Based on Abstruse Premise.

The author's premise is that past, present and future converge at all times upon an individual and that at some place where time is nonexistent all three factors become manifest. Such a place was Hotel Universe, and, for the eight major characters, pasts caught up with presents. There is no story here, as stories go; rather is this a play to be watched intensely, and pondered over long and seriously.

No single person was especially outstanding, but they all—even George Farrington as Felix, the butler—had parts of a pivotal nature, for each person was, at one time or another, the object of authorial analysis.

So, merely to state that those named in small type preceding these appreciative remarks carried the play should not be looked upon as indicative of mere adequacy; they are all so very essential to the drama and interpret their roles so excellently that to say more would be to qualify the strength of their work.

Daughters of 1812 End Session Here

The National Society of United States Daughters of 1812 closed its three-day convention at the Willard Hotel yesterday with the adoption of resolutions calling for strong measures against undesirable aliens and seditious activities.

The organization also voted to back Army and Navy building programs.

One of the resolutions called upon Conggress to establish an alien registration bureau to fingerprint all aliens in the United States.

At their banquet the preceding evening, the 500 delegates and guests of the Daughters were entertained for two hours by the songs and dances of mountaineer students of Crossnore School, Crossnore, N. C. The daughters support this school by collecting old clothes from all over the country and selling them.

City Lights.

Broadway, in the daytime, is a hag without makeup. But at night, when the street is flooded with light, Broadway is an exciting vista. It is as if the Stem had reached into its compact for lipstick and rouge.

Guess every city is like that, for I remember cities by their lights. First time I ever saw Pittsburgh was in 1916. Your correspondent, with the proceeds of one $100 Liberty Bond as capital, was running away from high school to join the Marines. As the train came into Pittsburgh, along the yellow Allegheny, I saw hundreds of coke furnaces along the hills, their red tongues of flame mirrored ruddily in the river. That memory of Pittsburgh persists to this day.

But the Marines turned me down, and in desperation, I found work in the Illinois freight yards at Chicago. So it is that I remember that city—locomotive headlights stabbing through the icy darkness of the railroad yards. Rude, vigorous curses as a long queue of us derelicts loaded beef into the freight cars. An occasional flurry of fists as one, more clumsy than the rest, dug the steel prow of his hand-truck into the ankle of the man ahead of him. In the yards, taunting us, who shivered in the freezing blasts of Lake Michigan, a lighted observation car of the Sunset Special, loading for the race across the continent.

Quebec: A memory of the brilliantly-lighted Chateau Frontenac as we left that charming city by boat. Far above, on the hills, the hotel was etched against a star-powdered sky—the sky itself orange-tinted by the reflection of the lights of Quebec. We stood at the rail and wordlessly admired it, as the boat slid downstream.

• • • •

In St. Louis, night after night, I wandered down to the riverfront. The green and red riding lights of the sidewheelers, anchored in the Mississippi, danced up and down on the ripples in a fascinating ballet.

Hours before you get to Havana, you can locate the city by the bonfire of kilowatts in the heavens. As the ship draws nearer to shore, you are enchanted by a mile-long necklace of electric lights, for the Cubans have made the first view of their city deliberately dramatic—and spell-binding. Havana, at night, is a breath-taking movie set, and Joseph Urban could not have selected the colors more deftly.

Nassau: Gayly-lighted yachts riding at anchor in the harbor; and tied to the quay, a fleet of sponge boats with tiny kerosene lamps for identification in the night.

The lights of Savannah, Ga., burst upon you suddenly. For hours, you drive through the swamps outside the city, your headlights gleaming for miles along the oily roads. Then, suddenly, in one last furious effort of speed, the car gets clear of trees and swamps and underbrush, and ahead the sky is lemon-colored by the city lights of Savannah.

• • • •

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., where the lighthouse far up on the hills throws an intermittent beam to the ocean. Ships beating their way up the coast, lashed by mountainous seas, look eagerly for this light and breathe easier when they see it, for this is one of the city lights of the dangerous Atlantic boulevard.

Miami, as you view it at night from the causeway to Miami Beach, is a carnival city. Rose, blue and yellow lights indulge in an electrical orgy and the glass surface of Biscayne Bay catches and exaggerates the reflections. You expect to hear hurdy-gurdies and carroussel music when you see the lights of Miami and you are disappointed not to see people dancing in the streets, for it is that kind of a place.

Night flatters cities . . . Broadway, in the glare of a noonday sun, is a drab acreage of concrete . . . But who will deny that, at night, Broadway is vibrant, challenging, provocative as a gorgeous minx . . . But, Broadway needs electricity pouring through its arteries to bring it to life, needs the rouge and lipstick of Neon to smooth out the wrinkles.

Toscanini

About 3,500 persons were in the hall.

Toscanini was applauded for minutes as he came on the stage. His musicians, many of whom wept during final rehearsal today, stood with the audience as he stepped on the podium.

Shouts of "bravo" were heard and many in the audience cried. Following the performance, Toscanini bowed as applause roared through the hall and then the photobulb flashed in his face.

The maestro stepped back and walked off the stage as the applause continued. When he failed to return the applause grew louder. Then the announcement was made and some of the audience booed photographers who were taking pictures of the orchestra.

Seats for the gala farewell performance were placed on sale March 16 and were sold within a half hour. Every seat in Carnegie Hall was filled. There was not a foot of standing room to spare.

The program included Beethoven's overture to "Leonore," No. 1, Beethoven's violin concerto in D-major, with Jascha Heifetz as soloist, and three compositions by Wagner.

Toscanini will leave the United States Saturday when he sails for Paris on the Champlain to conduct two concerts to raise funds for a monument to the French composer, Saint-Saens. Then he will retire for rest to his villa in his native Italy and emerge only on rare occasions to take his place on the podium.

Late this summer he will conduct the operas "Die Meistersinger" and "Falstaff" at the Salzburg festival. In the fall he will go to Palestine to conduct a few concerts.

Long famous as musical director of La Scala in Milan, Toscanini first came to New York in 1908 to assist Gatti-Casazza at the Metropolitan Opera House. In 1926 Toscanini was guest conductor of the Philharmonic-Symphony for the first time.

A Tuneful Work Is Interpreted By Church Club

'Tulip Time' Proves Ace Vehicle for Spring at First Baptist.

"TULIP TIME." The Wigs and Queues Dramatic Club, in association with the Luther Rice Chorus, presents the operetta in two acts, with book, lyrics and music by Geoffrey F. Morgan and Frederick G. Johnson. Directed by Raymond E. Rapp, Howard Moore and Lena G. Parks, with stage setting by Arlie Johnson. Musical accompaniment by Mr. Rapp. At the First Baptist Church April 29 and 30.

Staged and presented with the color and charm of the Netherlands when the national flower blooms, "Tulip Time," an operetta in two acts by Geoffrey F. Morgan and Frederick G. Johnson, was pressed last evening by the Wigs and Queues Dramatic Club in collaboration with the Luther Rice Chorus.

The story opens in the village of Osendorf, which has its holiday broken up by the arrival of a party of American students on a botanical trip under the tutelage of Prof. McSpindle (Franklin Armiger). Ned (Rollin Lawrence) and Dick (Carle Baker) become more interested in Christina (Bertha Railsback) and Katinka (Lila Hicks) than in the tulips.

Love vs. Mentor.

News arrives of the presence of a tulip thief and the boys dress the professor so that he is arrested as the culprit by the burgomaster (Gus Thomason). With their mentor for the nonce safely out of the way, the boys proceed to matters of greater import—the pursuit of the tender passion and saving Christina's bulb fortune. That accomplished, her Aunt Anna (Alice Haig) proves the professor's innocence and everybody is happy.

The lively story was embellished with many tuneful songs, among which "As Long as the Windmill Turns" (a real windmill added to the effects), "Tulips That I Love" and "Love Needs No Language" were particularly well received by the enthusiastic audience.

The principals, as indicated, worked smoothly in their roles, singing in good voice and putting enthusiasm into the reading of lines. The operetta was directed by Raymond E. Rapp—who also accompanied the work on the piano—Howard Moore and Lena Parks.

Mrs. Wheat, Justice's Wife, Is Critically Ill

Mrs. Alfred A. Wheat, wife of Chief Justice Wheat of the District Supreme Court, is seriously ill of pneumonia at the Mayflower Hotel.

Members of her family reported her condition to be unchanged last night. Her illness became known when a delay was caused by the absence of Chief Justice Wheat in the utility suit attacking the $200,000,000 New Deal municipal power program.

Those five remarkable young ladies, the Dionne Quintuplets, supported by Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Peterson, John Qualen, Montagu Love, David Torrence, Frank Reicher, Robert Barrat, June Lang and Slim Summerville, not to mention many more in minor roles, will be the pictured stars at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, in "The Country Doctor." This is a repeat engagement of the film based on the life and work of Dr. Dafoe.

"Escape Me Never," starring Elisabeth Bergner, with an able cast in support, will be next week's major attraction at the Little Theater, beginning Sunday. As a companion feature, "La Cucaracha" will be shown. This was the first release of the natural color subjects made with the new Technicolor three-tone process. "Escape Me Never" is a film version of Miss Bergner's Broadway stage success.

Beginning Sunday afternoon at the Gayety Theater, the burlesque offering will be "The Merry Whirl," a new production of the Independent Burlesque Association, in which "Rags" Ragland will be the featured comedian. The feminine star of this troupe is Maxine DeShone, one of the beauties of this branch of the theater.

Marian Chace and Michael Logan, with the Chace Dance Group, will be seen in the National Theater Sunday night at 8:45 o'clock, in a benefit program for the farmers who suffered severe losses in the recent flood at Harpers Ferry, W. Va. The feature of the program will be "Nine Earnest Men," a satire of the United States Supreme Court.

On next Wednesday night, May 6, at 8:30 o'clock, the fairy opera, "Snegourotchko" ("The Snow Maiden"), by Rimsky-Korsakoff, will be given its first Washington performance in English. The production is under the sponsorship of Mme. Marie Zalipsgy and Eugene Shastan, of the Art of Musical Russia, Inc.

Phil O'Brien conductor of Dave McWilliams' 12-piece dance orchestra at the Spanish Garden ballroom, Glen Echo Park, is offering novel programs of special features this season, with specialties every Wednesday night. His music has attracted heavy patronage despite unfavorable weather conditions. All of the other amusements at Glen Echo are in full operation, with the exception of the Crystal Pool, which will open next month.

Restaurant Men Hear National Secretary

Frank J. Wiffler, secretary of the National Restaurant Association, spoke Tuesday night to members of the Washington Restaurant Association, a division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, on "Meeting Modern Competition in the Restaurant Business."

Dr. R. R. Ashworth, of the District Health Department, spoke, congratulating the local restaurateurs on their co-operation with the health department. The meeting was held at the S. & W. Cafeteria.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Recital by Emma Otero, soprano, and Ernesto Berumen, pianist, in the Willard Hotel ballroom Wednesday night. Program: For voice—"Una voce poco fa" (Rossini), "El pano moruno" and "Seguidilla murciana" (De Falla), "Chiquilla" (Obradors), "Vuelvemelo a decir" (Turina), "Te quiero dijiste" (Grever), "Malaguenas" (Pagans), "Guitarra Espanola" (Alonso), "Clavelitos" (Valverde). For piano—Ballade on Two Mexican Folksongs and "Marchita el alma" (Ponce), "Ritual Fire Dance" (De Falla), "Cordoba" and "Malaguenas" (Albeniz), "The Alhambra" (Cassado), Concert Allegro (Granados).

Preliminary announcement that Emma Otero, not wishing to disappoint her audience, was about to sing with the handicap of a severe cold prepared one's critical sense to make all charitable allowances. The preparation was, however, unnecessary, for the Cuban soprano sang over the cold with a clarity of tone which, for all one knew to the contrary, might have been its normal quality. Only an occasional forcing of the tone gave evidence of difficulty in production.

In the Rossinian aria, the voice was flexible, pure in intonation, and agile in fioritura. The high tones were not pinched, but had rondure and color. Her reading of the familiar lines had a piquancy of characterization and a pleasurable warmth of feeling in place of the empty vocalization to which some prima donnas subject them. The two groups of Spanish and Mexican songs displayed versatility in interpretation.

Ernesto Berumen may not have been in the vein for the full disclosure of his abilities; at least, his playing did not have the vitality which one remembers as its salient trait in other years. On the contrary, it was for the most part undistinguished, and at times even stodgy, although always technically competent. The most interesting of his selections was the nocturne by Cassado, which owes something to Debussy, and the least interesting was De Falla's "Fire Dance." This has long since lost its novelty, and should be dropped from the pianists' repertoire; it is not pianistic, and was not designed for the instrument in the first place.

Maryland Official Is Arrested in Bed

Thomas L. Dawson, secretary of state for Maryland, was served with warrants charging him with driving under the influence of liquor and reckless driving yesterday.

The warrants were served in Dawson's home in Rockville by two Montgomery County policemen. Dawson was in bed at the time, recuperating from injuries received in the auto accident which resulted in the charges brought against him.

Mrs. Ann Dawson, wife of the official, attempted to dissuade officers, saying her husband was "asleep," but Sergts. Roy Bodmer and J. S. McAuliffe entered the house, went to the second floor and read the warrants to Dawson as he lay in bed.

Dawson, if found guilty, faces a possible fine of $100 on the drunken driving charge, and $1 on the reckless driving charge.

Both warrants were sworn out on Monday by C. J. Gentzler, of Clarendon, Va., as the result of a three-car collision on the Rockville pike Sunday night, in which Dawson's machine was said by police to have crashed into the automobile of Gentzler and another motorist.

Saitos Hosts On Birthday Of Emperor

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The birthday of His Majesty, the Emperor of Japan, was celebrated here yesterday by the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito who entertained at a reception from 4:30 to 7 o'clock at the embassy.

The flag in front of the embassy, because of the significance of the occasion in tribute to Japan's own Emperor, did not fly at half mast as did those of the other nations yesterday in respect for the passing of King Fuad of Egypt. Cars, coming and going, lined the wide semicircular drive within the front enclosure all afternoon, with the doorman calling through his megaphone to the gateman as the departing guests were ready for their automobiles.

The rooms of the embassy, all appointed in soft colors, repeated inside the house the atmosphere of spring the guests were enjoying in the garden and on the open balcony with its vine-covered rail, overlooking the trees and the stream in the park below. The flower arrangements throughout the rooms were the subject of comment—as artistic as pictures, by Japanese painters, both ancient and modern, which hang on the walls of the embassy.

Drawing Room Decorated.

In the drawing room was a large vase of white peonies and white snapdragons; at the opposite end of the room were smaller bouquets arranged on the various tables, one of drooping white tulips, another of white peonies and roses; a little black bud vase with a few white sweet peas and, near the doorway, a little flat oblong basket with a bunch of pink sweet peas, a bunch of white ones and a bit of maidenhair fern.

Mme. Saito, gowned in a blue lace of delicate shade and wearing a strand of pearls at her neck and lavender orchids on her shoulder, received with the Ambassador in an adjoining room, and seemed part of the delicately-toned setting in which she stood. White lilacs nearby were another note of spring.

Among the several hundred guests who came during the afternoon were the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther; the Ambassador of Belgium and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky, the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka, the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. MacWhite, the Minister of The Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With.

Embassy Staff Assisted.

All of the members of the embassy staff were assisting, including Mr. Seijiro Yoshizawa, the counselor, and Mme. Yoshizawa, whose young niece, Miss Shizu Nakamigawa, is sailing from Seattle for her home in Japan tomorrow. She accompained them here last October when they came to Washington and has been their guest until a week ago when she left for New York and from there went by train to the Pacific Coast to take her boat.

Among other guests were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Mr. Justice Roberts; Mrs. Elizabeth Roberts, Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, Senator Joseph F. Guffey and his sisters, the Misses Ida V. and Pauletta Guffey, Senator and Mrs. James P. Pope, Senator Arthur Capper, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, Gen. Peyton C. March, former Chief of Staff; Representative and Mrs. H. P. Kopplemann, the Chief of Chaplains and Mrs. Alva J. Brasted, Commander and Mrs. Herbert Howard, the Surgeon General of the Army and Mrs. Charles R. Reynolds, Dr. Leo Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union; the Misses Mary and Ann Randolph, Mr. Adolph Miller, Mrs. Willoughby Chelsey, Mr. Eben F. Comins, the portrait artist, who expects soon to go to Mexico to spend a month.

Mrs. George Barnett was also there, and Mrs. Anne Archibald, with Mr. Henry Howard, who was one of the organizers of the International Chamber of Commerce in Japan; Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. Robert Love Taylor, Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Mark Sullivan, the Misses Patten, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis McCarthy Little, Mrs. Andrew J. May, wife of Representative May, who had with her her sister, Mrs. H. D. Fitzpatrick, of Prestonburg, Ky.; Judge and Mrs. Eugene O. Sykes and Miss Mal Sykes.

Mrs. McCook Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Mrs. Davies wearing a brown taffeta ensemble and a corsage of gardenias, and Miss Olivia Stokes.

Miss Mildred Dilling, harpist, of New York, who played Tuesday night at the musicale given by the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky, was also among the guests.

Rawsons Return Here After 8 Years in India

The Rev. and Mrs. A. Among them are the Rev. T. R. French, Miss Pansy Palmer and Miss Minnie E. Abray.

The Rawsons returned Tuesday after a trip to Richmond, Va., where they were guests of Mr. Rawson's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Connell.

Within a few days they will leave for California, where Mr. Rawson will attend a postgraduate school at St. Helena. They will come East again later to spend a few months in Buffalo, N. Y., and in Kingston, Ontario, with relatives, before returning to India.

Guests Attracted to Great Bowl of Ice Cream, Welcomed Because of Capital Heat; Ladies Offered Tiny Black Cigars from Cuba by Mr. Bilmanis.

By Dudley Harmon.

Even more cosmopolitan than most Washington parties, noted for their international aspect, was the "at home" given yesterday by Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Minister of Portugal. Not only were there many diplomats from many nations, but the hostess herself is a Russian, and her daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, who assisted her mother in receiving, was born in China, educated in Paris, and speaks the language of five different countries.

Although Mme. de Bianchi's cards read from 5 to 7, guests were still arriving at her Wardman Park apartment when we left at 7. Some had come from the reception at the Japanese Embassy, and others were on their way there.

A great bowl of pistachio ice cream on the dining room table was the center of attraction, especially for those diplomats who were having their first taste of Washington heat yesterday. In the library port was being served. It had come directly from Portugal, famous for this wine, which takes its name from the island of Porto off the main coast.

"Queen Victoria drank a whole bottle of this every day, you know," said Mr. Paulo Hasslocher, Commercial Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy.

The Minister of Latvia, Mr. Alfred Bilmanis, offered little black Cuban cigars to the ladies. "They're wonderful; American women ought to smoke them oftener," said one guest, puffing vigorously behind clouds of smoke.

The Ambassador of Mexico, Senor don Francisco Castillo Najera, who has so many different decorations he can wear a different one to parties at the embassy of nearly every country, wore in his buttonhole yesterday a military cross bestowed upon him by the Portuguese government. When he goes to the French Embassy, the Ambassador wears the rosette of grand officer of the Legion of Honor. The Counselor of the Embassy, Don Louis Quintanilla, wore the rosette of an officer of the Legion yesterday.

Others among the hundreds who attended Mme. de Bianchi's "at home" yesterday were the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo y Patterson, with Mrs. Campbell Prichett, Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Justice Stone; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, with her son, Mr. Arthur Vandenberg, jr., who is secretary to his father, Senator Vandenberg, and her daughter, Mrs. Barbara Knight; Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Mrs. Harold Hinton, Mr. Will K. Ryan, Miss Beatrice Phillips and Miss Stellita Stapleton.

Miss P. Guffey Is Mistaken for Bride By Photographers

Miss Pauletta Guffey, sister of Senator Guffey, has been besieged by photographers, wanting her picture since the announcement of the approaching marriage of her nephew, Mr. Joseph F. Guffey Miller and Miss Paula Larned. Miss Larned is to arrive in Washington within a few days.

"Is Miss Paula in?" inquire those who telephone. Miss Pauletta is called and the requests to take her picture in her bridal gown before the wedding are repeated. Miss Guffey is not the Miss Paula who is making wedding plans. Miss Larned was named for her father, Maj. Paul Larned. Miss Pauletta's name is a combination of that of her grandfather, whose name was Paul, and part of that of her mother, whose name was Barbetta.

Miss Pauletta and Miss Ida Guffey have just returned from Pittsburgh, where they went to vote in the primaries, and were with their brother, Senator Joseph F. Guffey, at the reception in the Japanese Embassy yesterday.

Royal Hansom In Show Today

Owned by King George of England When He Was Prince of Wales

A hansom cab owned by the late King George of England when he was the Prince of Wales is to be exhbited in the charity horse show being sponsored by the Montgomery County Council of American Legion Posts Sunday afternoon at Chevy Chase, Md.

Mrs. George Livingston, of Washington, now owns the rig, which will be drawn in the old-fashioned costume class by a proud-stepping harness horse driven by Miss Elizabeth Jackson.

The cab was built in London in 1890 for King George, then Prince of Wales, and lined with blue velvet, while the trappings are of gold.

Mr. F. Larmour Oyster, chairman for the show, proceeds of which will go to the legion's new orthopedic clinic for crippled children, expects more than a score of other old rigs to be entered in the class, novelty feature of the meet.

Republican Women Will Hear Brewster

Representative Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, will speak on "Republican Candidates and Platforms" at the monthly meeting of the League of Republican Women to be held at the Mayflower on Monday at 2:30 p. m.

Representative Brewster, who served two terms as Governor of his State, is the only Republican member of Congress from Maine.

Najera Is Patron Of Benefit Dance

The Mexican Ambassador, Senor Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, has been announced as one of the patrons for the dance recital to be presented by Marian Chase and Michael Logan at the National Theater Sunday night at 8:45 o'clock.

The program is given to help a few of the farmers and their families who are in serious distress as a result of loss of all their property near Harpers Ferry in the recent flood. Wedding Solemnized in St. Alban's Church; Bride Given Away by Her Father; Couple Motor Through South.

Miss Eleanor Henderson Brooke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Edward Brooke, of Chevy Chase, was married at 8 o'clock last evening to Mr. Ben Hopson Dyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin B. Dyer, of Camp Hill, Ala. The ceremony took place at St. Alban's Church, the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating. Palms and mixed spring flowers were the decorations.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin gown made on princess lines, with a lace De Medici collar and a long, full train. Her tulle veil was made in the form of a tucked cap trimmed with a double row of orange blossoms at the back and a face veil in the front, held in place by a tulle chin strap. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies tied with satin ribbon.

Mrs. Robert Fuchs, the matron of honor, wore a gown of aqua chiffon, with a short jacket with elbow-length sleeves trimmed in bands of tiny ruffles and carried a bouquet of spring flowers. In her hair were clusters of spring flowers matching the bouquet.

The maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Brooke, twin sister of the bride, wore a dress made like that of Mrs. Fuchs. The bridesmaids, Miss Dorothy Schutz, Mrs. Burr Edwards, jr., Miss Winifred Kohler and Miss Margaret Henderson, wore gowns of chartreuse chiffon, made like that of the matron and maid of honor. They also carried bouquets of spring flowers and wore clusters of similar flowers in their hair.

Mr. Arthur Gerth, of Washington, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Robert Fuchs, Mr. Charles Sebastian, Mr. Fred Carpenter and Mr. Burr Edwards, jr., of Washington, and Mr. Richard McCaffrey, of Baltimore. Mr. Barret Fuchs sang several selections.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride for relatives and close friends. The house was decorated with palms and spring flowers.

Mrs. Dyer chose as her going-away costume a suit of beige wool with dress to match, trimmed in beige fur, and wore a corsage of gardenias and lilies-of-the-valley. After a motor trip through the South, the couple will reside in Washington.

Mrs. Dyer attended American University. Her husband attended Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the University of Minnesota and is a member of Phi Kappa Tau Fraternity.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Quick-Drying, Delicately Scented Hand Lotion, Related to Famous Old Soap, Now Can Be Had.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

By Mignon.

VERY SMART producers have put upon the market recently a lotion to match their famous soap of exquisite and very delicate fragrance. The soap is extremely old, but like all good things, seems to be permanent, as the sales keep up throughout the years, proving better than anything that I can say that it has real worth.

The lotion is marvelous for the hands, and is perfect for an after-shaving lotion for both men and women. The introductory package had a bar of the soap and a bottle of the lotion in a box together. The lotion has that same delicate fragrance that has made the soap famous. If you use this soap you really don't need an after-bath toilet water or cologne unless you particularly like to use one.

One nice thing about the lotion is that it dries out quickly so that it doesn't leave you sticky, and doesn't leave you scented enough to interfere with any perfume you may use.

My advice is for you to try it. You'll be glad you did.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column phone The Washington Post, National 4200, Ext. 323. Please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Face Bleachers Often Injurious As Beauty Aid

Freckle Creams May Contain Caustic Materials That Mar Appearance.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

In yesterady's article the age old tendency to use beautifiers was discussed. It was noted that face and body powders may occasionally contain substances to which certain individuals may be sensitive (allergic).

What about face creams? Cold creams are mixtures of fat and water and the quality of the cream depends not so much upon the source of fat as upon the finess of division of the particles.

Freckle creams and face bleaches, however, may and frequently do include caustic materials and, in some of them, salts of mercury are employed. The persistent use of these constituents may, in special instances, result in the appearance of grayish appearing blotches on the skin.

Benefit of Cream.

Vanishing creams are usually fatless—that is, they are combinations of soft soap and glycerine. A small amount of fat may be added to give a slight "body" to the mixture and to help hold the perfume. A short while ago an English physician used a well-known vanishing cream on 40 different persons. The cream was applied to one side of the face each night and removed in the morning. Tests were continued for from four to six weeks. In 24 cases the cream proved harmless, in 13 the effect was markedly beneficial, in 2 no change was noted, and in only 1 case was undesirable drying observed.

Hair removers or depilatories depend for their action upon the sulphides of calcium, sodium, barium, or magnesium. As a rule these particular chemicals are relatively harmless except on a sensitive skin. Mention has been made of the extremely poisonous effects of thallium, which but a few years ago was a popular hair remover. While this substance has probably disappeared from such preparations the warning shoud be repeated, as a new brand is born almost every week. If one desires to remove superfluous hair permanently the only safe method is by means of the electric needle in the hands of a skilled and competent operator.

Preventing Wrinkles.

There are really no effective wrinkle removers, although many astringent lotions are sold for the purpose. Injections of paraffin under the skin were recommended a few years ago, but it was discovered that the paraffin sooner or later became lumpy, and the grotesque effects produced stopped the practice. Wrinkles come with time, and are occasioned by the irregular deposit or absorption of fat beneath the skin. This in turn depends on circulation, diet and habit. Massage, outdoor exercise and a normal balanced diet will do more to prevent wrinkles than a million bottles of any lotion.

Depression Aid To Education, Author Asserts

Helen Christine Bennett Discusses Trends in Teaching.

Glimpsing the silver lining of opportunity beneath the cloud of depression, Miss Helen Christine Bennett, author, believes education has come into its own since 1929, and that now, as never before, learning is being regarded as "a lifework and a life recreation."

In Washington to continue her research on recent changes in education, Miss Bennett, at the Dodge Hotel yesterday, discussed some modern trends in teaching and pointed out how emphasis today is being placed on instruction for adults as well as for youth.

"Courses of study are being revamped entirely, since the depression has augmented the enrollment in high schools," she said. "In 1920, the average child had one chance out of ten to continue his education above the grades. Recent statistics show he has six chances out of ten. This indicates that many besides 'privileged pupils' are now in high school."

Now Have Goal.

Girls and boys no longer drift in and out of classrooms, continuing their courses without any definite goal, according to Miss Bennett. "The depression has taught the young, as well as the old, that school life must be a preparation time for any future career," she said. "In view of this, courses are now being designed for all types of pupils, where they were formerly planned to suit only one type."

The rise of vocational schools is the result of this, she believes. High schools to which a certain class of pupils never went before are now being crowded by boys bent on learning mechanical engineering, carpentry or commercial art and by girls who want to learn how to cook or sew or be superior wives and mothers.

Probably the best development traceable to the depression is the growing emphasis on adult education, Miss Bennett said. She has observed in visiting schools throughout New York and New Jersey that jobless mothers and fathers who first became interested in self-improvement in parents' institutes are now crowding into WPA classes throughout the country. "Between periods of searching for employment they are taking courses in shorthand, typewriting, economics, and government," she pointed out. Mothers are learning how to make their homes more pleasant, their meals more nourishing and attractive. They are also learning how to be better buyers and better mothers to adolescent children."

Depression a Boon.

Such developments, Miss Bennett is convinced, are enough to prove that the economic depression has been a boon to education; that persons suffering most by unemployment are finding, even through this, a golden opportunity for self-government.

Formerly a teacher and later connected with the Board of Education of Philadelphia, Miss Bennett has also had much experience in journalistic and editorial work and has written numerous articles on educational subjects for leading magazines.

Her present research on modern trends in education—particularly in adult fields—may eventually end in a book. "I'm not yet sure about that," she said. "But certainly recent developments in education for grown-ups make the subject interesting enough for many books. Ever since an eminent educator stated that a man or woman of 42 or more can learn as well as a child, men and women throughout the country have wanted a chance to go to school. The depression gave them that opportunity. What they are doing with it is revolutionizing the whole system of education."

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Two Years Is Dangerously Long Time to Ask Girl to Wait When Her Family Is Opposed to Engagement.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am engaged to a girl and we had planned to be married in the near future. Now, if we follow these plans I will not be able to give her all she deserves. She is accustomed to luxury, and I fear she would not be happy. I have a chance for a splendid position in another city, lasting for two years, provided that I am unmarried. The salary is much better than my present one, and if I take it I will be able to marry in two years and still have a good position. But I am not sure she will wait two years.

Mary Haworth

• • • •

There is a young man to whom her parents would like to see her married. He is in a much better position to support her than I. I feel sure she does not love him, but she is largely under the influence of her parents, and in my absence might possibly be persuaded to marry him.

• • • •

I shall be greatly obliged if you will advise me soon, since this position will not wait indefinitely. Thanking you in advance, I am. GREATLY PERPLEXED.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Before making any decision here, have a brass-tacks talk with the girl. Take her opinions and counsel into account in reaching whatever decision you finally make. Then, whatever happens, you will have less to regret than if you made a decision entirely of yourself, or accepted one ready-made from me.

Two years is a rather dangerously long time to ask the girl to wait, since there are forces in her immediate environment conspiring against the engagement and since you know she has a suggestible mind. Yet I cannot believe any woman could really respect and love a man who would turn his back on opportunities for professional advancement simply through fear of losing her. Some time ago in this column I had occasion to make the following statement of opinion, which I believe applies equally well to your case:

• • • •

Men who are men, not just males of the species, are capable of making and rightly should make decisions pertaining to where they shall live and work and such decisions must be made without undue pressure from their womenfolk if best results are to obtain. A man incapable of making such important decisions for himself, one who will yield his innermost convictions to another in such matters, is a dubious pillar of strength for wife and children to lean on . . . Maintain your integrity of thought and action. Reserve the right in these crucial early years to determine the direction your life shall take and let your fiancee test her maturity and fitness for married responsibility by cooperating with you in tackling the problem of how to make your two paths converge in happy marriage.

• • • •

If your fiancee is such a namby-pamby that she cannot glory in your first painful efforts upward toward increasing success, and I cannot gallantly share with you the sacrifice which the two years' separation will represent; if her love and her character are not strong enough to withstand the pressure her family may bring upon her to marry another, during your absence, she is hardly qualified to be the helpmeet of a man who has his professional way to make in life.

• • • •

Since you "fear she would not be happy" married to you on your present income, it seems to me you would be starting marriage under a heavy handicap in making her your wife now. You would be feeling uncertain, apologetic and deprecatory when you should be feeling exalted and altogether adequate to the task of making her completely happy.

• • • •

Moreover, it may be true that women enjoy making sacrifices for the men they love; but I doubt that a man ever got happiness out of making professional sacrifices in the name of love. I believe an ambitious, intelligent man can live down any heartbreak if he is wedded to a good job which means increasing recognition in his chosen professional field. As a matter of fact, the girl may stand as much chance of losing you as you stand of losing her, should you finally decide to take the bachelor's opportunity which beckons. New places, new faces and absence of the beloved often make the heart grow fonder of someone else, you know.

M. H.

Chic Garment Is Practical As Slacks; Gives Free Movement.

By Frances Mangum.

Alas for the poor Gibson girl, who, though an ardent cyclist, never knew the fun of culottes. And, while her influence on fashions has been marked this season, at least it hasn't extended this far. When she a-cycling went she wore a wide skirt, and long flowing bloomers that fastened below her knee in a manner similar to men's knickerbockers. All this plus a starched shirtwaist and wide brimmed straw sailor held snug by a rubber band.

What a contrast are the modern costumes, be they slacks, sports skirts, or culottes! Onl a season ago slacks were voted to the fore, but now feminine fancy has swung almost unanimously to culottes which combine the trig appearance of a skirt with the practicality of slacks.

Indeed, the wide legs, everyday length and pleats both back and front make culottes hard to distinguish from skirts. However, when a young miss mounts her fiery two-wheel steed it's this type of costume that gives freedom of movement combined with a sportsy chic.

In general there is only one type of culotte, but this comes with dozens of variations. For instance, there's the wool, jersey, or flannel affair that's grand for coolish days. Then there's the heavy cotton, the peasant linen, the glazed chintz, the pique, or poplin ones suited for late spring and summer. There are the culottes in solid colors, stripes and figures. Culottes in two pieces, and those in one.

Negative Reply To All Requests Hurts the Child

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"Mother, may I go swimming?"

"No, Tommy, it's too cold today."

"May I go to the movies?"

"No, the show is not the kind I want you to see."

"Let me go with you to meet daddy?"

"No, I want to see your father alone."

"May I sprinkle the lawn?"

"No, you'll get your clean suit wet."

Mrs. X said that Tommy always asked for things which she could not let him have or do. On the face of it, this list of a few of one day's demands would bear out her assertion.

It did seem as if the child went out of his way to hunt up impossible requests. Mrs. X's refusals were all based on the best possible reasons. But the long and short of it was that Tommy felt abused, hemmed in on every side by restrictions.

His mother thought him negativistic. "He wants to do what he musn't and won't do what he may" was her frequent complaint. If she had stopped to think she would have realized that she was quite as much at fault as Tommy.

She wanted Tommy to do what she said, and did not wish him to do what he wanted. She had formed a habit of saying "no" to all his demands, and then thinking up a reason to justify herself.

It is a very easy habit to get into and a dangerous one for discipline. Some day Tommy will rebel, perhaps openly, more probably secretly, and do what he likes in open defiance of his mother's orders and requests.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE.

JERRY HAD THOUGHT his course out.

First to warn Ruth, have her ready for whatever emergency might arise. He even found a chance away from Mrs. Murphy's watchful eye to talk it over with Bette.

"There's something queer happening in this house. You know it as well as I do," he had told her.

"Of course I do. I've just shut my eyes to things. I didn't dare see too much."

"I know." Jerry was a diplomat. "There's nothing you need do but stand by. I've got the thing all thought through. At 6, Pascoe goes into the breakfast room for his dinner. He leaves Bradley to watch the sick man."

"My sister will be in her room and Mrs. Bradley will be up in hers. Right?"

"Yes."

"Well, I'm going to watch my chance. When I see the cook go into the pantry, I'll lock her in."

"She'll make an awful howl."

"What if she does? She can't get out. The walls are thick. No one will hear her and the windows are too high and too narrow for her to escape. After she's disposed of, I'll tap the gong for Pascoe to come down to his dinner just as he always does."

"And then what?"

"Easy, from there on. The breakfast room has a key right in the door."

Bette shook her head. "I'm afraid your plan couldn't possibly go through. By the time you got started Mr. Bradley would be wise to what's happening. I'm afraid of him."

Frail Chance.

"You needn't be." Jerry showed Bette the bulge of a small revolver protruding in his pocket. "I found this in the pantry. It's loaded. It's a nice little persuader and I know exactly how to use it. It will keep Joseph Bradley covered until you telephone for the police."

"I'll try." Bette said. She was shaking visibly. It seemed a frail chance to Jerry, although he hadn't admitted it to Bette, but worth taking in this desperate situation.

He tried to reassure her. "It will be easy. We'll soon all be out of this mixup."

"I hope so." Bette worried. "I know that things are wrong here, all wrong, but I've been helpless."

"You aren't helpless now. All you need to do is just as I tell you. You won't fail me?"

"I won't fail you." Bette promised. And things might have gone right. Certainly Jerry had the nerve to do his share to make them go right. The note to Ruth had been Jerry's undoing. It had seemed a safe enough thing to do—just to write a brief note, put it hastily under Ruth's door when he knew no one would be looking. It would reassure Ruth. Surely the poor girl had had enough to make her frantic with fear. Yes, it would be safe enough.

Jerry had come swiftly down the corridor, stooped to push the note quickly under the door. Then he had straightened—only to find himself looking straight into the muzzle of Joseph Bradley's revolver.

"Go along," the suave Bradley commanded in a low voice, motioning with his revolver.

And Jerry, with no alternative but to be obedient to that menacing weapon, obeyed. In a back room of the servants' quarters Clara Bradley had helped her husband bind him, hand and foot, on the bed. Bradley found and removed Jerry's pistol.

"You see," Bradley hissed. "It was as plain as the nose on your face to me all the time. He isn't any servant. He came here as a spy. He put a note under the girl's door. I knew all along that you were fooled."

"Maybe you're right," Clara Bradley agreed with unaccustomed meekness.

Just a Spy.

"Of course, I'm right. I'm usually right, but you won't admit it," her husband and master snapped. "Now you come along. I've made up my mind to get through with this thing. The job has been bungled all of the way. I'm in charge of it from now on. You hear?"

"Yes," his wife said humbly.

They went away, locking the door after them. Jerry, helpless, sat where they had flung him. So this was the way his carefully laid plans had turned out? He had thought them carefully laid when he made them.

The memory of the triumph in Joseph Bradley's face stung. Maybe he was slow to anger, maybe he wanted badly enough to cover up his tracks, but if he had to, Jerry knew that Bradley could be a ruthless, deadly foe.

Strange, though, how the look of exulation had been swept from Joseph Bradley's face afterward when he came back to unlock that door.

"Can you drive a car?" Joseph Bradley asked. At his command Clara Bradley was already releasing Jerry.

"Yes, why?"

"Don't ask questions. If you do exactly as I tell you, I'll turn you loose later."

"And this is where you're crazy," Clara muttered. "I can drive the car or we could make the chauffeur do it just as well as we can make this kid."

"You can't drive the car. You'd drive us into a ditch," Bradley told her roughly. "And you knew when I sent Tom clear across the city when we got out in the park that it would be an hour until he gets back."

"With the only car that we can make decent time in," Clara moaned.

"The coupe can make decent time. Besides, it's safer, less conspicuous. Are you getting him untied?"

"The ropes are off," Jerry said. His courage was beginning to rise.

"I think you're wrong to try it this way." Clara Bradley muttered.

Bradley swore. "My God, I don't know why I don't just leave you here. But you're such a welcher you'd squeal on everybody."

Pascoe Is There.

"I'd get out of it some way," Clara Bradley bragged.

"Like fun you would. That girl is locked into the room down there and the telephone is O. K. Pascoe insisted on leaving it on so that he could get in touch with McGuire."

"Well, remember that Pascoe's in the room, too," Clara reminded.

"I'm remembering. Come along. And stop talking. We haven't any time to lose."

The three went hastily down the back stairway, Clara first, then Jerry, with Bradley so close upon his heels that the boy could feel the nervous prodding of the revolver at his back.

They got into the coupe, all in the one seat together. Bradley sat in the middle. Jerry could still feel the insistent poke of that revolver.

"Please don't forget and accidentally pull that trigger." He tried to laugh, knew that his teeth chattered even as he tried.

"I'll not forget. You're getting us out of here. See? Now get started."

They were at least two blocks from the house when they heard the clamor of the police siren.

"I told you," Bradley reminded his wife. "I told you she'd call the police. We haven't got away a minute too soon."

Jerry's heart was pounding with excitement. The shrill sound of that police siren might strike terror to the hearts of the Bradley's; but it struck joy to his heart. It meant that help had come to Ruth. Whatever his own plight, Ruth would have protection in just a few minutes.

"Say, listen," he pleaded, his voice just a little less trembly. "Honest, I'm afraid of that thing. It makes me nervous. Please put it in your pocket. I'll drive this car just as far as you want me to drive it and just as fast, but don't threaten me with that or I'm likely to get so nervous that I'll run us into the ditch. You see?" The car lurched, almost locked fenders with a passing car.

"Be Careful."

Bradley laid the revolver on his knee, but retained his clasp on it. "O. K., but don't put on any smart-alecky show. I know right now that you are trying to attract attention, trying by your driving to make people think that you're drunk so you'll get someone to follow us that way."

"Well, don't. I'm desperate. I'm telling you. I'd just as soon have a running gun fight as go on this way. So don't get funny."

"I'll not get funny," Jerry promised and he meant exactly what he said. This thing was too serious for taking any chances.

"O. K. If you drive us out of here, you'll get what's coming to you."

"And if you don't, you'll get what's coming, too," Clara promised.

Jerry drove, without another word. It was a relief not to feel that prodding metal. Alive, he at least had a chance.

He was too confused to know in what direction they were headed. Bradley gave quick, concise directions. There was nothing left for Jerry to do but drive—drive as rapidly as it was possible to drive without attracting attention.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY GOT MARRIED on a shoestring, but they've been as happy as plutocrats, maybe happier. Anyway, they planned carefully and assembled an attractive home with furniture of good quality and design. Most of their things are in colonial mahogany and the upholstered furniture is in taupe mohair . . . the broadloom carpet is taupe, too. The only catch now is that they'd like a fresher, brighter effect. They can have slip covers made for the upholstered furniture and plan on having the walls and windows done over. But what about the rug—is there any way to pep it up a bit . . . they have to keep it. And they'd like some ideas for arranging things comfortably.

Why not have the walls in light gray, the glass curtains white, the draperies in flowered chintz on a white ground, the sofa in carnation red, the two easy chairs in carnation pink, the extra chair in green. In brighten up the taupe carpet, have a small rug (7) in oval shape made of textured gary broadloom and finished around the edges with wool fringe. The room has four windows, which is pleasant . . . we'd have the sofa (1) between two of them with end tables (2, 3) at each end, a coffee table (6) in front of it and a pair of easy chairs (4, 5). The radio (8) could go between two other windows with an easy chair (9) and an end table (11) near. Then have the secretary (10) on the other wall space.

Airport Body Membership Is Completed

Byrns Names Nichols, Mrs. Norton and Cole to Commission.

Organization Parley Due Soon; No Action Likely This Session.

The membership of the District Airport Site Commission was completed yesterday as Speaker Byrns named three House members from the District Committee to the roster of nine.

Disregarding requests from non-committee members that one or more of the commissioners be selected from the House at large, the Speaker named Representatives Norton, chairman of the committee; Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Cole (Republican), of New York.

While no chairman has been designated, the commissioners plan to call an early organization meeting, probably for the first of next week.

Sultan a Member.

The other six members are Senators King, chairman of the Senate District Committee; Copeland (Democrat), of New York, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, and Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, District Engineer Commissioner.

Under the terms of its organic act, the commission is directed to file its report and recommendations with Congress at the earliest practicable date.

While some of the commissioners hope to complete the inquiry before Congress adjourns, it is generally conceded that there is little likelihood that legislation authorizing construction of an airport can be passed at this session. It is predicted, however, that the airport matter will be one of the first semi-local questions before the seventy-fifth Congress.

Deadlock Possible.

Unless the commission avoids the two most controversial airport sites—Gravelly Point and Washington Airport—a deadlock is likely to occur as it has in Congress every time airport proposals have been made in the last decade.

At least four members of the commission in the past have signified a preference for Gravelly Point, while another four have gone on record as opposed to that site.

Senator King, Delano and Col. Sultan are all members of the Park and Planning Commission, which has been the foremost advocate of Gravelly Point, and they individually have approved this site. Senator Austin, as a colleague to Senator Gibson, the author of a Gravelly Point bill, probably will side with them.

The House District Committee, on the other hand, on recommendation of its special airport sub-committee, has gone on record as unalterably opposed to Gravelly Point.

Copeland Vote Crucial.

Two of the members of that sub-committee, Nichols and Cole, are on the commission. Mrs. Norton is neutral personally, but in a Senate-House scrap doubtless would vote with her colleagues. Gen. Westover, if he follows the precedent of the Army Air Corps, will stand with the House members.

Orphan, 11, Wins 'Dad' Contest At Father and Son Banquet

An 11-year-old orphan, Daniel Hershberg, was the hero last night at a Washington Hebrew Congregation Brotherhood father and son banquet.

Three hundred and fifty boys and almost as many fathers cheered as he was declared the winner of an essay contest on "What My Dad Means to Me."

Circumstances, however, compelled Daniel to write about his foster father, B. L. Eisenberg, head of the Jewish Foster Home.

The prize winner promised he would show his appreciation to Eisenberg by "being good, not in the sense of being a sissy and afraid of dirtying my pants, and so forth, but in bringing home good marks from school and listening to the things he expects of me."

Daniel was awarded a suit of clothes.

Second prize, a baseball glove, went to Morton Luchs, 9, another youngster from the foster home, while third prize, a collar and tie pin set, was won by Walter Hess, jr., 13, 3700 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Thirteen other essayists were awarded consolation prizes.

Among honor guests and later beseiged for autographs were Clark Griffith, Washington ball club owner; Buck Newsom and Bill Starr, Washington ball players; Natie Brown, boxer; Arch McDonald and Arthur Godfrey, radio announcers; Nelson Bell, Nick Altrock, John Payette, Gene Ford, Hardie Meakin, Don Craig, Harry Lohmeyer, Harry Baker, Kirk Miller, Shirley Povich, Richard McCann, Francis E. Stan and Bob Considine.

Goldie Ahearn, boxing promoter, and Jim McNamara, Jewish Community Center athletic director, put on a boxing show.

The entertainment program also included movies and skits by theatrical stars from Loew's Fox and the Earle Theater.

Sidney B. Lust was general chairman and Adlai Mann master of ceremonies.

Baseball and theater passes were distributed among all the boys present.

Police Hunch

Officer, Scenting Suicide, Prevents Woman's Leap.

A policeman's hunch early yesterday saved a woman's life.

About 5 a. m., Private Karl G. McCormick, of the Seventh Precinct, was pounding his beat on M street, near Key Bridge.

A middle-aged woman passed him. She was alone. Something strange about her appearance made McCormick wonder.

"I'll bet she's going to commit suicide," he hunched. "If she walks toward that bridge, I'll follow her."

When she crossed the street toward the bridge, he hailed a passing car and overtook her. His hunch was right. She admitted she was going to jump, said "personal difficulties" had gotten too much for her. He turned her over to the Woman's Bureau.

Hazen Urges Federal Aid On Tax Basis

Tells Civic Federation U. S. Should Share D. C. Costs.

Roberts Criticizes Owners for Letting Property 'Go to Seed.'

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen last night suggested a lump-sum contribution based on taxation of Government office buildings.

"This would be the fairest way of arriving at the Federal Government's contribution to District expenses," he told the victory banquet of the Northeast Council of Citizens' Associations at the Brookland Methodist Episcopal Church.

He pointed out that the Government owns 40 per cent of Washington's real estate, based on assessed valuation, yet its pays less than 15 per cent of the city's expenditures.

"It is easy to see from these figures," he added, "that the load on the District's taxpayers is away out of proportion and that the Federal lump-sum contribution is far too small."

Naerly 150 members of the Brookland, Burroughs, Chillum Heights, Kenilworth, Lincoln Park, Dahlgren Terrace, Michigan Park, Stanton Park and Trinidad Citizens Associations and the Brookland-Woodridge Business Men's Association attended the banquet.

Others Speak.

The banquet was held to celebrate the victory of these organizations in achieving six major improvements in the Northeast section of the city—the Eighteenth street underpass, Ninth street overpass, Franklin street bridge, Michigan avenue overpass, Turkey Thicket recration center and the firehouse at Fourteenth street and Rhode Island avenue.

A score of District and civic officials were present to aid in the celebration. Those who made short speeches included People's Counsel William A. Roberts; director of highways, H. C. Whitehurst; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; John Nolen, jr., director of planning of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Roberts, addressing his audience as "fellow scrappers," told of the deterioration of residential sections in our larger cities, saying that the value of these areas always drop, sometimes as much as 50 per cent in 25 years.

He placed the blame for this at the door of persons who let their property go to seed, thus driving out the better neighbors and paving the way for the inroad of undesirables.

Cites Cleveland Plan.

"The solution of this problem," he said, "lies in strict zoning laws and such an experiment as has been tried in a suburb of Cleveland. People there have agreed to put covenants in their deeds requiring property owners to do such things as keep their houses painted and their lawns in condition."

Lodge announced that the controversial subject of parking meters would be brought up at Saturday's meeting of the federation. Cautiously avoiding an expression of his own opinion on this matter, he warned that Saturday's meeting is the time for anyone with an opinion to express it.

A. F. E. Scheer, president of the Northeast Conference, welcomed the guests. Dr. Herbert Wright, past president of the Michigan Park Citizens Association, acted as toastmaster. The presidents of the member associations also spoke.

If the District is considered capable of electing delegates to the political conventions of the major parties, they certainly should be allowed to vote for the candidates they nominate for President, Paul E. Lesh, an attorney, last night told 100 persons at the second banquet of the Petworth Citizens Association.

"Some of the opponents of National representation for the District have argued that Washington residents vote in other States," he said. "The facts do not bear this out. According to the census of 1930, only 15,105 residents of the city voted in other States."

After the banquet, which was held in Joppa Temple, 4209 Ninth street northwest, entertainment was offered by Mrs. Nell S. Chaillet, soprano, accompanied by Mrs. Cornelia Long Kinsella. Miss Doris M. Koons gave a reading and the Madison Brothers acted a comedy sketch. Earl W. Cooper, president of the association, was toastmaster.

New Procedure Aimed to Speed District Bills

Special Committees Will Handle Each Measure Individually.

Instituting a new procedure designed to expedite local legislation, Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee yesterday referred the Juvenile Court and the narcotics control measures to special sub-committees for immediate hearings.

The new policy contemplates the dissolution of all standing sub-committees and the appointment of special sub-committees from time to time to hold hearings on controversial bills. Mrs. Norton believes that the new system will prevent pigeonholing or other undue delay in reporting bills.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was named chairman of the sub-committee charged with the Juvenile Court bill, which last week was surrendered by the Judiciary sub-committee. Other members are Representatives Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia; Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana; Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Brewster (Republican), of Maine.

Schulte Is Chairman.

Schulte was appointed chairman of the special sub-committee to hold hearings on the narcotic control bill. His associates will be Representatives Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, and Cole (Republican), of New York.

While Mrs. Norton is not unduly optimistic about the prospects of passing the Juvenile Court bill this session, she wants the hearings held so that it may be reintroduced and adopted early in the Seventy-fifth Congress. She expressed the belief that the narcotic control bill can be passed by unanimous consent. It has been approved by the Senate.

Mrs. Norton said she considered the Juvenile Court bill has been improved by amendments made by the District Commissioners.

The committee reported favorably the Senate-amended bill to curb reckless driving upon recommendation of Representative Carpenter, chairman of a sub-committee on traffic. The bill provides a maximum penalty for first-offense reckless driving of $250 fine or three months imprisonment or both.

2 Alleged Bookies Seized in E Street

The men, Otto Albert Heitmuller, 51, of the 1700 block Columbia road northwest, and Thomas Robert Bassi, 1400 block Pennsylvania avenue southeast, had a quantity of racing slips in their possession when arrested, police said.

Policeman Roy E. Blick, who arrested the men, said he also recovered a quantity of marked money from the men.

Child Program For Tomorrow Includes Plays

Health Day Also to Launch Playground Season Campaign.

Health plays and pageants, field games and other playground activities will mark Child Health Day tomorrow and the launching of the spring playground program, under the direction of Miss Sybil Baker, supervisor of playgrounds.

A civic standards campaign for playground beautification also will be opened by appointment on each playground of the safety patrols for the next six months.

"In this campaign," it was announced, "cleanliness, neatness and proper use of equipment are to be stressed, as well as freedom from accident and the co-operation of the older folk of the community in the beautification of the playground. The police, the District of Columbia Motor Club and the Women's City Club are co-operating."

First-aid kits, which have proved satisfactory in the past, are to be made part of the equipment of each playground.

Athletic efficiency contests, field day programs of games, father-and-son contests, Maypole dances, movies, health talks to mothers by physicians and a marionette "health" play are part of the program.

National music week will be observed beginning on Sunday with programs at the following grounds: Payne on Monday; Logan, Tuesday; Willow Tree, Wednesday; Lincoln, Thursday; Barry Farms and Randall jointly and Rose Park on Friday.

Soldiers Home to Get Rare Whisky Shipment.

A hundred and fifty cases of rare 24-year-old whisky valued at $20,000 were en route last night to the Soldier's Home here from Nashville, Tenn. The liquor will be used for medicinal purposes in the home's hospital.

The liquor was seized in 1919, United States Marshal James R. Jetton told the Associated Press.

"It seemed a pity to destroy such fine whisky," he said, so it remained in the customs house, but it became an increasing problem as years passed.

Mrs. Norris Wins P.-T.A. Vote Contest

Extension of 'Round-up' of Pre-School Children Is Sought.

Mrs. Charles Norris was elected secretary of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers yesterday in a closely fought battle for the only officer's post that was contested. She defeated Mrs. Dell Gilbert Sale by a vote of 280 to 270.

Installation of the officers for 1936-37 brought to a close the group's twenty-third annual meeting, at which resolutions were adopted urging extension of visual education in the public schools, strict enforcement of regulations keeping liquor dispensaries at a distance from school buildings and churches and passage of the pending Juvenile Court bill.

"Roundup" Extension.

Extension of the parents' and teachers' "roundup" of pre-school children was recommended to the delegates by Dr. Hugh J. Davis, child hygiene director of the District Health Department.

Now conducted in the spring and summer months, this survey should be established on a year 'round basis, said Dr. Davis. He pointed out that the availability of social security funds for public health work will result in increased service at pre-natal clinics and child hygiene stations.

By extending the "roundup" period, the various parent-teacher associations can make possible immeasurable benefits for boys and girls who might otherwise go without adequate medical inspection, Dr. Davis asserted.

Character Building.

The new officers are: Mrs. W. B. Fry, president; Mrs. C. C. Mullady, treasurer; Mrs. B. W. Eldred, historian; Mrs. Norris, secretary, and Vice Presidents Mrs. O. G. Hankins, Mrs. Francis L. Goodwin, E. D. Reed, Mrs. H. N. Stull, Mrs. Lucian Jordan, Mrs. Lloyd Miller and Mrs. B. R. Wood. They were installed by Mrs. Shaffer.

Park Board Hears P St. Group Today

With the complaints of Georgetown citizens against paving P street occupying a prominent place on the new business docket, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will open a two-day meeting this morning.

Chairman Frederic A. Delano will present the traffic complaints to the commission tomorrow, it was announced yesterday. They are in the form of letters mailed to him by residents demanding a halt to plans to increase the automobile traffic burden on Georgetown streets.

At today's session the planners will consider requests of various citizens' associations for additional playground space. They also will take up the five-year school building program drafted by the Board of Education.

Greenberg Breaks Wrist, Out for Month; Nats Triumph, 7-3

Detroit Held To 2 Hits by Appleton

Detroit Star Will Be Out for a Month After Bumping Powell.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Old Pete Appleton, who failed thrice to stick in the big leagues under the name of Pete Jablonowski, insured the permanence of his present stay with a two-hit pitching performance yesterday that brought the five-game winning streak of the Detroit Tigers to a grinding stop.

Old Pete curve-balled the Tigers into submission and had a one-hit game in his possession until the ninth inning when Al Simmons whacked a home run into the centerfield bleachers to reduce Washington's margin to 7 to 3.

The Tigers' defeat at the hands of Old Pete was both ignominious and costly. Hank Greenberg, their slugging first baseman, was forced out of the game in the sixth inning and out of uniform for a month when he suffered a fracture of the radius bone in his right forearm in a collision with Jake Powell at first base.

Knocked Down in Crash.

Directly in Powell's path when he took a throw from Third Baseman Marvin Owen, Greenberg had caught the ball when the flying Powell crashed into him. Greenberg was knocked off his feet and both ball and glove flew into the air from the force of the crash.

In panic, Greenberg's mates gathered about him in prayerful hope that the wrist he broke in the World Series of 1935 was not re-injured, only to realize their fears.

Rushed to a doctor's office, where X-ray pictures of the wrist were taken, Greenberg learned that a bone adjacent to the wrist bone fractured last year had been broken. His arm was placed in a splint and doctors stated he would be out of the lineup at least for amonth.

Career Was Threatened.

Greenberg last night forced a smile upon his countenance despite his misfortune. He had been told by doctors that he was fortunate in that the bone he broke last year was not injured. Such a break, he was told, would have permanently ended his baseball career.

It was no mean task they gave Old Pete Appleton when they sent him against Tommy Bridges, an old nemesis of the Nats, but Appleton outpitched the Tiger ace all the way and played a potent part in the Tigers' defeat with his batting as well as his pitching.

A double to left by Charley Gehringer in the fourth inning stood as the only hit permitted by Appleton until the ninth, when Simmons socked a ball into the bleachers, but that wallop produced the only earned run off Appleton.

Back in the fourth the Tigers scored two runs to tie the game at 2-2 but it was a dismal error by Cecil Travis that gave 'em those tallies. After Gehringer's double, Old Pete struck out Greenberg and then filled the bases by walking Simmons and Goslin. With a perfect double play in sight on Rogell's

Gomez Knocks Indians Out Of Lead, 6-1

Yankee Hurler Limits Tribe to 3 Safeties; Strikes Out 5.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 29.—Pitching his best game of the season here this afternoon, Lefty Gomez set the Cleveland Indians down with three hits and the New York Yankees won, 6-1. The defeat dropped the Indians from first to third place.

Lefty struck out five and walked one in winning his third game of the season. The Indians scored their only run in the sixth when Frankie Pytlak doubled to left and scored on Roy Hughes' single to center.

The Yankees took the lead in the third, scoring a run on Myril Hoag's double and Bob Rolfe's single. They secured this lead in the sixth when they scored four more on Ben Chapman's walk, Gehrig's single, Dickey's double and Gomez's double. Lefty's blow, which Earl Averill lost in the sun, scored two runs.

This barrage marked the end of Thornton Lee's toil on the mound for the Indians and brought Willis Hudlin out of the dugout. He was touched for the last Yankee run immediately when Rolfe bunted safely, went to third on Gehrig's single and scored on an infield out.

Cubs Beat Mungo In Mound Duel, 1-0

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 29.—In one of the season's finest pitching battles, the Chicago Cubs, behind Bill Lee, defeated Van Lingle Mungo and the Brooklyn Dodgers here this afternoon, 1 to 0.

Both pitchers allowed only four hits, and Mungo, playing in his usual tough luck, was denied at least a tie when his single with two out in the fifth hit Ran Berres in the leg and retired the side when Jimmy Bucher was on his way home from third with the tying run.

Terps Swamp Midshipmen In 9-1 Rout

Wood Holds Tars to 4 Hits as Mates Get 14; Keller Has Perfect Day.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 29.—Hitting the ball hard and giving a classy exhibition in the field, Burton Shipley's University of Maryland ball tossers easily defeated the Annapolis Midshipmen today by a score of 9 to 1.

The Terrapins found no difficulty in connecting with two Navy hurlers and collected a total of 14 safe droves, on the other hand, George (Lefty) Wood baffled the Tars with his slow-breaking curves, and let them down with four scattered bingles. The Navy batsmen frequently reached for the slants to miss by wide margins, or else pop easy flies.

Prosperity Is Back; $40 Top Set for Louis-Schmeling Bout

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 29.—Boom times officially returned to the boxing industry today as Mike Jacobs announced a $40 top for the heavyweight bout between Joe Louis and Max Schmeling in the Yankee Stadium June 18.

Not since the lush years of 1923-1929 has any promoter dared to boost the ante so high, and no other tickets for a nonchampionship bout, listed for public sale, ever have carried so expensive a label. So-called "patron press" ducats for Schmeling's tussle with Paulino Uzcudun here in June, 1929, just before the depression struck, were priced at $50, however.

Scaling his prices from $3 to $40, including tax, Jacobs predicted the 15-round bout between Detroit's "Dark Destroyer" and Schmeling, former holder of the title, would draw gross gate receipts of $1,500,000.

Except for the restricted "patron press" seats of the Paulino-Schmeling match, the $50 ringside seats for Jack Dempsey's heavyweight title defense against Georges Carpentier, at Jersey City in 1921, stand as the highest-priced ducats in boxing history. A $40 top was charged for the Gene Tunney-Tom Heeney title match here in 1928 and for Tunney's championship defense against Dempsey at Chicago in 1927.

Louis' spectacular surge through the heavyweight division has led most experts to believe that Jacobs is conservative, if anything, in predicting a $1,500,000 gate. They pointed out that Louis and Max Baer drew just under $950,000 and Louis and Primo Carnera more than $325,000 last year, with the "house" scaled well under the prices that will prevail for the Negro's battle with Schmeling.

Red Sox Top Chicago, 8-7 For Lead

10,000 See Boston, in Uphill Battle, Win in 9th Inning.

Rick Ferrell's Single With Bases Loaded Brings Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 29.—The Red Sox, waging an uphill battle most of the game, regained first place today by topping the Chicago White Sox, 8-7, before a 10,000 midweek crowd. Rick Ferrell's single with one out and the bases loaded in the ninth brought in Rog Cramer with the winning run.

Wes Ferrell, Boston's right-hand ace, lasted only six innings, during which he gave out eight hits. Fritz Ostermueller then worked for a third-inning. Jim Henry, the Memphis rookie, finished the game and registered his first major league victory.

The visitors pulled into a 7-6 lead with a 4-run rally in the seventh. The Sox tied the count in the eighth. In the ninth the catcher came to bat with the bases crowded and whacked out his third hit of the game.

Cards Win in 17th, 2-1; Parmelee Tops Giants

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 29.—In one of the most perfectly pitched games in the recent history of the major leagues, Roy Parmelee, of the St. Louis Cardinals, stood up for 17 innings against Carl Hubbell and his old teammates, the New York Giants, here today and finally won when the Giants' infield collapsed and let in the winning run. The score was 2 to 1.

Parmelee, traded away by the Giants because of his wildness, struck out nine men, walked four, and gave up only six hits to the 50 men who faced him. Hubbell fanned 6, gave 11 hits, and also walked 4.

Virgil Davis opened the seventeenth with double down the first-base line, and Lyn King was sent in to run for him. Hubbell purposely passed Charley Gelbert to get to Leo Durocher, who hit a deep drive to Hank Leiber for the first out. Next up was Parmelee, who hit a double-play ball to Dick Bartell, but the Giants' shortstop fumbled it and the bases were full. Terry Moore was the Cards' next batter. He grounded to Travis Jackson at third, who fielded the ball perfectly, but threw wide to the plate, and King scored when Mancuso was pulled off the plate to catch the throw.

The Giants scored first in the first of the twelfth when Burgess Whitehead drew a walk at the start of the inning, advanced to second on Mel Ott's sacrifice, and scored on Hank Leiber's drive to center.

But the Cards came through, as usual, in their half of the inning, and had they been less eager would have ended the game here. With one out, Joe Medwick singled through short and went to second on Johnny Mize's double to short right. Stuart Martin, a rookie, went in to run for Mize, and when Charley Gelbert, the next man up, singled, Medwick scored the tying run and Martin, waved around third by the coach, was out at the plate on a perfect throw from Mel Ott to Gus Mancuso. Leo Durocher then hit a long fly to Joe Moore, which would have scored Martin had he been held on the bag.

Hit Batsman Gives Bucs 10-9 Victory in 11th

Pittsburgh, April 29 (AP).—Pitcher Bucky Walter lost control after intentionally passing two men to fill the bases in the eleventh inning today and hit Gus Suhr with a pitched ball, forcing home the run that gave Pittsburgh's Pirates a 10-9 victory over Philadelphia.

Little Lloyd Waner, playing his first full game this season after a layoff because of pneumonia, paved the way for the winning rally by doubling with one out in this final frame.

Mrs. Meckley, Mrs. Simons Tie in Keefer Cup Golf Play

District Star Shoots 80; Net Is 79

By Dave Herman.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, had only a one-stroke handicap yesterday at Chevy Chase, but her great medal round, an 80, believed to be a new feminine competitive course record, enabled her to tie Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor, for the first-day lead in the 36-hole tournament for the Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer Cup.

Finishing with a sensational birdie 3, Mrs. Meckley, who has a habit of breaking records at every turn, shot the incoming nine in 38, four over men's par, after going out in 42.

Mrs. Simons, whose game has improved tremendously in the last year, had 91—12—79 for her net-tieing score.

Mrs. Meckley, stroking the ball beautifully and putting up to standard, had a penalty stroke on the fifteenth, but came back to get her 5. She tapped in a 10-footer for her 3 on the home hole.

Score Believed Lowest.

Women golfers pointed out yesterday that Helen Hicks once shot a 77 in a practice round at Chevy Chase and that Mrs. L. O. Cameron and Mrs. Harrison Brand, club members, have been around in 78. Mrs. Meckley's 80 is said to be the lowest ever registered in a medal round.

One stroke behind the co-sharers of the low net came Mrs. William Masten, of Washington Golf and Country Club, with 94-14—80, and bracketed in third place were Mrs. T. J. Johnson, Army and Navy, with 96-15—81, and Mrs. W. B. Legg, of the host club, with 93-12—81.

Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, scored 85-3—82. Mrs. David Clark, of Army and Navy, Middle Atlantic champion, had 86-3—83, and Miss Helen Dettweiler, 88-2—86.

Only five women out of a field of 105 broke 90.

The final 18 holes will be played today. The trophy will be given by Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer, of Chevy Chase, former president of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association.

Gilman's Rally Downs G. U. Prep Nine, 5-2

Held scoreless for five innings, Gilman, of Baltimore, rallied to trounce Georgetown Prep yesterday at Garrett Park, 5 to 2. Miller, striking out ten and allowing five hits, received credit for the victory.

Blues at Oregon Inlet; Post's Writer en Route

Jack Hawley, The Post's fishing expert, is now en route to Oregon Inlet, N. C., where the bluefish have begun to strike, and will conduct his column, "Out Fishing," from Manteo, N. C., for the next ten days.

Hawley scored a notable triumph yesterday when he received word that bluefish had been caught at Oregon Inlet, justifying to the day his prophecy that the bluefish would appear on April 28. Other fishing reports published locally did not anticipate the arrival of the bluefish at Oregon Inlet until the second week in May.

Western Beats Central, 7-5, In Upset

Kushman Allows 10 Hits in Winning; Three Homers Socked.

By John R. Vosburgh.

All was not so quiet on the Western front yesterday, for Western High beat Central in the interhigh series, 7 to 5, thereby joining the championship Eastern team in the series lead. The achievement, recorded as something of an upset, occurred before some 1,000 onlookers on Western's field, unaccustomed as it is to interhigh contests.

The triumph was to some extent a personal triumph for lanky, bespectacled Leaton Kushman, a string-beanish right-hander who pitched a calm, courageous game for Western despite the fact he yielded ten bingles. He had the faculty of keeping Central's hits scattered more diplomatically than Lefty George Rowles, Central's ill-fated moundsman.

Lefty George allowed but eight hits but they came bunched in such a manner as to render them extremely valuable to the Western cause. For instance, in the fifth inning, Western went to bat trailing, 5 to 3.

Borden Drives in Tally.

Centerfielder Joe Feuz momentarily juggled the ball and Middleton scored. Rowles took the throw and threw to second in a futile attempt to catch the sprinting Lynham. By this time Edmonston had rounded third and Second Baseman Ange Valenza threw home to nip him. Rowles intercepted the throw again, however, and Edmonston scored with the tying run.

Thereupon, Paul Borden cracked the third single of the inning to score Lynham with what proved to be the winning run. In the previous inning Western had combined a single by Lynham, a double by Henry Doyle, a passed ball by Bill Askin, and a single by George Oertel for the two runs which brought it up from the short end of a 5-to-1 score to 5 to 3.

Kushman allowed but two hits in the last five innings, setting Central down in order in four of them.

16 Horses Likely Starters in Derby

Listed among the other starters were Woodward's Merry Pete, E. R. Bradley's Bien Joli and Banister, the Fighter and Sangreal, from Mrs. F. C. Mars' Milky Way Farm; Mrs. Silas B. Mason's He Did, the Bomar Stable's Forest Play, C. B. Shaffer's Coldstream, the Wheatley Stable's Teufel, Mrs. B. Franzheim's Silas and the lone filly Gold Seeker, from William du Pont jr.'s Foxcatcher Farms.

Forest Play will start only if the track is fast, while there is a chance that Gold Seeker will sidestep the issue, as only one filly, Regret, has ever been successful in the mile and a quarter test.

W. S. Kilmer's Ned Reigh was declared out of the race definitely. The son of Neddie had practically recovered from the fever developed in the trip from New York, but Trainer Jack Whyte said his charge was in no condition to get the needed work.

There was evidence today that the track would not be at its best for the big event, as overcast skies augured a typical Derby day. Rain falling at intervals broke up the heat of the last two days, but left a worried look on the faces of the officials, who are planning on handling the largest crowd in the history of the stake.

With Bradley watching every move, Bien Joli was clocked in 2:09 3-5 to beat Banister, which was caught in 2:10 1-5. The master of Idle Hour, winner of four derbys, was plainly disappointed in his colts' performances and declared he thought Brevity would win.

Bradley received some consolation in Bien Joli's last quarter in 25 1-5 seconds. It has always been his contention that to win a derby a horse must be capable of stepping the last quarter in :25. Banister failed to fill the bill, however.

Bill Coyle to Announce Sarron-Miller Title Bout

For the first time in history a local announcer has been selected to handle a network sports program. Bill Coyle, WMAL sports commentator, will handle N. B. C.'s Nation-wide broadcast of the Freddie Miller-Petey Sarron featherweight championship bout scheduled for May 11 in Griffith Stadium.

Coleman Tests Sonnenberg Tonight

Dynamite Gus Beaten But Once in His Bouts at Arena Here.

By George Considine.

Mister Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg, former world wrestling champion, will strut his royal stuff in company with Mister Kangaroo Abe Coleman in what is humorously known as the main event this night at Turner's temple of terpsichore.

Of course it doesn't matter, but growling Gus has lost only one matravesty locally since his de-boo in 1928. If it weren't for the fact that rassling is nothing to be proud of, that accomplishment would be something to be proud of. All of which is about as clear as a rassler's eye.

Gus received his lone setback at the hands, or rather feet, of Jumping Joe Savoldi last summer at the ball park. It was altogether fitting and proper that he should bow to Jumping Joe because the former Notre Dame football great was at that time enjoying a terrific build-up.

But speaking of luring customers through the turnstiles, Dynamite Gus is still in a class by himself. Whenever he deigns to work locally the ring is always embellished with a flurry of top hats and lorgnettes. The famed creator of the flying tackle is the only journeyman able to attract the so-called "four hundred."

Companion-in-comedy Coleman bears a striking resemblance to Sonnenberg. He is short, gymnastic and sports a knockout specialty corresponding to the flying tackle. For want of a funnier name he calls it the kangaroo kick. The only difference between it and the original is that the kangaroo sometimes connects.

In the semi-final Doc Len Hall will attempt to scale the mountainous slopes of Harry Fields, the Empire State Building's little brother. Last time Fields walked down F street a group of natives, thinking the huge matman was a fugitive from the Alps, started to yodel.

Assigned to consume the time from 8:30 o'clock until 9:27½ o'clock are Abe Goldberg and Jim Coffield on the one hand and Mike (Hotcha) Mazurki and Al (Grr) Tarroff on the other.

Maryland Frosh Rout Tech, 13-4

Taking full advantage of the wildness of the visiting hurlers and the miscues by the fielders, University of Maryland freshman baseball nine rang up its second victory in as many starts by walloping Tech High, 13 to 4, yesterday afternoon at College Park.

George Knepley, Old Line first baseman, was the leading batsman, getting a double and two singles and scoring two runs in four trips to the plate. James, Weidinger and Aud were on the mound for the winners.

Appleton Permits Tigers Only 2 Hits hard grounder, Travis booted the ball into center field and two runs scored. Pete cut the rally short when he caught Goslin at the plate on an attempted double steal.

The Nats didn't tarry with Bridges. After two were out in the first inning, Buddy Myer got the first of the Nats' 14 hits—a triple to the leftfield corner—and a two-run rally was under way. Travis followed with a double to right, and Stone contributed a single to center.

With the game tied at 2-2 despite Appleton's one-hit pitching and the seven hits the Nats had to show against Bridges, Washington bounced into a one-run lead in the sixth after Powell was safe in his collision with Greenberg. Kuhel sacrificed Powell along and Powell went to third on Bolton's infield out. Appleton scored him with a hot-shot single to center.

They put the clincher on the ball game in the eighth, driving Bridges from the box with a five-hit assault. Powell started affairs with a single to left and Kuhel followed with a single to center. Powell was caught at the plate on Bolton's grounder to Gehringer, but Kuhel advanced to third on the play and Appleton scored him with a perfect squeeze bunt that he beat out for a hit. Dee Miles followed with a single to center, Buddy Lewis contributed another single to the same spot and Myer drove over the fourth run of the inning with an infield out.

Pomp Attends Miller's Arrival Here Tonight

By Bill McCormick.

Miller will reach the Union Station at 8:20 p. m. He will be greeted by a delegation from the Police Boys clubs, for whose benefit the fight is being held, possibly by the Police Boys Club band, and a police detail which will escort him from the station. In the absence of Superintendent Ernest Brown, who is in Wilmington, Inspector Kelly will have charge of the police detail.

Also among those on hand to greet the champion will be Boxing Commissioners Kenneth Parkinson and Claude Owen and Maj. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the boxing commission, who made the championship match.

The champion, who has been training at the Pioneer Gymnasium in New York, will continue his conditioning grind here. He probably will work at the Humidor Gymnasium, 1121 Fourteenth street, where Sarron has been working out for the past week.

Sarron Nearly Ready.

Sarron was just a few days away from his finest fighting fettle yesterday, leading many to believe that he might go stale before the big battle. His manager, Jimmy Erwin, pooh-poohed the idea, however, pointing out that he was seeking to whip his charge into top shape as early as possible.

"For the Miami bout with Miller, Sarron reached his peak condition several days before the fight," Erwin pointed out. "Then he was able to rest for a few days and came into the ring with plenty of reserve strength and stamina. We will follow the same routine for this contest."

The supporting card for the title fight was announced yesterday. In a six-round semifinal, Baby Manuel, a Spanish featherweight, will perform against Jose Santos, a Portuguese. Manuel, a southpaw sparmate of Sarron, has fought both Miller and Sarron. He also has defeated such fighters as Joe Rivers, Howard Scott, Bucky Burton, Frankie Wolfram and others.

Santos is one of the leading featherweight contenders. He has beaten Mike Belloise, Abe Wasserman, Vittorio Tamagnini and others. He knocked out Joe Doherty and fought a close bout with Vernon Cormier.

Bobby Dean on Card.

Bobby Dean, the clever Pittsburgh southpaw, is scheduled to do six round with Sammy Angott, of New York. In his last bout, Angott dropped a close decision to Leonard Del Genio, one of the leading lightweight contenders.

A colored lightweight bout will find Andy Bundy, a stablemate of LeRoy Haynes, who is recognized as colored lightweight champion of the Pacific Coast, making passes for six rounds, or less, against Meyer Rowan, colored lightweight champion of New York State.

A four-rounder between Stumpy Jacobs, of Hopewell, Va., and Ray Ingram, a local lad, will open the professional card. To show the development being made in local amateurs, two amateur bouts will start the proceedings. In them, Joe Pietro, Metropolitan Police Boys Club and District 112-pound Golden Gloves titleholder, will tangle with Buster Miller, Boys Club of Washington and Silver Gloves champion.

In the other amateur bout, Danny Pietro will work three rounds with Charley Pietro. Both these Pietros are 60-pounders.

Brown Blanks Swift & Co. By 14 to 0

Reggie Brown, veteran left-hander for Milwaukee Beer, pitched a one-hit game in the Industrial League yesterday to shut out Swift & Co. packing firm, 14 to 0, on the North Ellipse.

The victory put the Milwaukee club in a tie for first place with the Heurich Brewers and Coffey Sales. The only hit gleaned off Brown's southpaw slants was a single by Second Baseman Gold.

Metzell, with a single, double and a triple in four trips to the plate, was the batting hero for the winners. Centerfielder Fitzpatrick hit a home run during the 14-hit melee of the Beermen. Although the game only went seven innings, Brown fanned 10 men.

National City League Franchises Changed

President Vic Gauzza, of the National City A and B Leagues, announced several changes in these circuits last night. Due to a decision by Federal Housing Administration not to support a team this season, Plaza Wine & Liquor Co. has taken over the vacancy left by FHA in the A section. The Liquers have added a flock of new stars to their roster in order to cope with the faster teams of the A section.

In Section B, Old Milwaukee Bee wil ireplace Plaza Wine & Liquor, and Woodmen of the World, Oak Camp, No. 4, is replacing the Roamer Wine Co. nine. The Cavaliers of the same section have changed their name to Nolan Motor Co.

Gauzza, who also is president of the Departmental League, announced that Home Owners Loan Corporation will replace the Federal Housing club.

Women's Duckpin Tourney Starts

The annual tournament of the Washington Women's Duckpin Association got off to a flying start last night at the Convention Hall alleys. Ladies' District League bowlers started the competition, which will see a record field of 120 singles, 68 doubles and 58 teams vying for onors through May 7.

The Lucky Strike girls established a mark for rival class A teams, toppling the maples for a 1616 set. Blanche Wootton, of the Rosslyn team, set the pace for the "A" singles shooters with 329. A. Smith's 296 is high for class C singles; B. Wilson's 291 tops class B and M. Mouse, also with 291, took the lead in class D.

The Temple team showed the way for the class B teams with 1550 and Charles eBauty Shop's 1489 led the "C" teams.

In the doubles, Robey and Smith were high with 589 for class B and M. Morgan and C. Russell's 559 was best in class C.

Walper Turns In Sizzling 67 Card

Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range teacher, walloped Old Man Par at Washington Golf and Country Club for a 67 yesterday.

Walper licked par by three shots with his 34-33, which is the lowest round any golfer has had at the tricky Washington course this season.

Although Prof. Walper was six strokes from Al Houghton's unofficial course mark, he treated his companions, Levi Yoder, Leo and Jim Cullinane and D. R. Tuxhorn to some uncanny shooting. Walper scored threes on the eighth and ninth, birdied the tenth and eleventh, took a six on the twelfth, and finished 3-3, two under.

Yoder shot a 75.

Walper's card:
Out ..... 534 444 433—34
In ..... 326 534 433—33—67

Lieut. L. K. Rice, Manor's golfing howitzer, scored a hole-in-one yesterday on the 151-yard eighth hole of his home course. A stiff seven iron did the trick. Encouraged by his ace, he birdied the ninth, a par five, and went out in 35. He had a 75 for the 18 holes.

Eddie Stevens, assistant pro; J. V. Price and J. S. Stadler played with him, Stevens scoring a neat 72.

Page Hufty yesterday reached the third round of the French High Commission Cup tournament at Chevy Chase. He defeated F. W. Coleman, 2 and 1. In second round matches Landra B. Platt beat A. C. Miles, 4 and 3, and P. S. Ridsdale won from D. D. L. McGrew, 3 and 2.

Georgetown University will meet Cornell in the first round of the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf League matches at Columbia Country Club Friday afternoon. Saturday morning the Hoyas face Penn State, and in the afternoon Pittsburgh.

Roosevelt Wins, Loses Track Star

A 9-foot pole vault by young Charlie Moore of Roosevelt High brought him first place and a broken wrist yesterday as he helped the Rough Rider track and field team open its season with a 76-to-28 victory over Montgomery-Blair High in Roosevelt stadium.

The lanky vaulter's mishap occurred on his last and winning attempt. Moore apparently completed his vault successfully, landing on his feet, but tumbled over on his right wrist, fracturing it. He will be out of action for the remainder of the season.

Otherwise, it was an auspicious season's opening for Coach Lynn Woodworth's squad. Roosevelt won 10 first places in 12 events, 18 of the 20 men entered placing. The finest performances were the :53.4 time turned in by Roger Buck in the 440-yard dash and the 2:11 half-mile run by Trueman Lancaster.

Legume Easily Captures Opening Day Feature at Pimlico

Daily Double Returns $109

Moose Peters Rides 3 Winners; Pompoon, Billy Bee Score.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, Md., April 29.—Legume, a sort of League of Nations horse, being owned by Breckinridge Long, United States Ambassador to Italy; trained by Mack Smart, a colored man; ridden by Johnny Bejshak, a Norwegian jockey; sired by Epinard, a French horse and foaled by Shenanigan, an Irish mare, scampered along in front to win the feature race today. Equipped with whip, blinkers and spurs, the little chestnut colt refused to yield to the pressure of the Greentree Stable entry and made every post a winning one.

Carrying $10.80 mutuel tag, Legume was credited with a length verdict over First Minstrel, which had seven lengths the best of Morpluck for the third money. The race, over the mile and a sixteenth course, was run in 1:46 3-5, rather slow time for a field that included four candidates for the Dixie Handicap.

The Greentree Stable set about winning the race in a systematic way but Legume threw a wrench in the plans. Peradventure was sent out to try to run Legume into the ground under the theory that First Minstrel would come from behind and win. Peradventure was only able to chase Legume to the far turn and then was taken wide to allow First Minstrel to come through the gap. First Minstrel then took up the chase. He challenged repeatedly, but Legume matched his every move.

The expected moves from Firethorn, Broker's Tip and Morpluck materialized but only in mild form.

This track had an auspicious opening day. Some 10,000 witnessed the sport under perfect racing conditions. The daily double brought a $109.80 mutuel, with Pompoon and Billy Bee being the winning team.

Swashbuckler, Preakness candidate, added another purse to his string in the fifth race, leading Kungsholm and Sailor Beware to the wire to pay a $5.80 mutuel. Fractious at the barrier, Swashbuckler was rushed up to take the lead from the tiring Enthusiasm entering the stretch and then galloped to the finish line with speed to spare. Kungsholm, on which Jockey Peters was attempting to make it four straight, closed some ground in the late stretch.

Hiatus, a Vanderbilt representative, easily disposed of her opposition in the seventh race, a 6-furlong sprint. She took command when called upon and drew out during the last eighth to win with speed in reserve. Peter Pumpkin was the well-beaten second and Tell It was third in the field of a dozen platers. The winner paid $5.10 in the role of favorite.

Pompoon, a first-time starter, made a show of his field in the first race. Jockey Moose Peters, the Havre de Grace champion, broke him on top and he withstood repeated challenges from Sonny Joe until midway of the stretch. At that point, the son of Pompey drew clear and won handily. Sonny Joe clung to second money and Banjorine was third all the way. The winner was a paddock tip and his odds shrunk steadily. He paid a $6.80 mutuel.

Rigan McKinney, the gentleman rider, exhibited his skill in piloting Santi Quaranti to victory in the first steeplechase of the season. The Swift and Sure gelding, owned by Thomas Hitchcock, took command on the first swing around the course and, fencing well, was never headed.

Billy Bee from the Bomar Stable proved Jockey Peters' second winner of the day and brought a $19.50 mutuel. Trumpery, C. V. Whitney color bearer, was second and Twice was third.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, Md., April 29.

Dear Al:

Bert Alexander, a horseman, arrived here today from Canada and said that it snowed up there yesterday and the tracks have been frozen. Which reminds us that some of the Maryland favorites have been cold and stiff for weeks. This track expects the biggest spring meeting since 1929. It was off to a flying start today, with betting and attendance far ahead of last year. The officials here have come down to earth to a certain extent of late, and they are arriving at the stage where they would be worthy of a "break." Given the sort of weather encountered at the Graw, Pimlico should thrive. The Preakness should draw in enough money to allow the Jockey Club to show a distinct profit. Jockey Moose Peters started and ended the Graw meeting with a winner. Today he began this session by riding Pompoon home in the first race, for the Benningites. This was one I thought would be 20-1, but this odds shrunk throughout the betting. However, a winner is a winner. BILL.

First race—Bergere, from the Vanderbilt Stable, seems well placed in the day's curtain raiser, and may add a set of brackets. Indiana ran a nice second at the other track and is due respect. Flying Feet to take care of the others.

Second race—This is a tough race and one that should be passed up. If you would toss in a deuce, you might do worse than take Kepi. El Dorador and Brad hold some chance, but anything can wing.

Third race—Whiscenda, a winner at Bowie, was named for the Aberdeen, but was scratched. Finds a spot that seems to suit here and a win would not surprise me. Ejector has a fighting chance off Graw races. Pass 'Em By, with a good rider, would be dangerous and might take it all.

Fourth race—Letter Box had a rough trip last out, and clear sailing today would find this one close, if not the winner. Droll Story raced greenly last out. This may be a sleeper. Fez for the show.

Fifth race—I'm going back to Headin' Home in this race, but I don't want him to have his hoofs rushed off. The right ride might bring a purse. Naval Cadet has been preparing for a race of this sort. Pomposity, particularly on an off track, would be a keen contender.

Sixth race—Genie Palatine seems outclassed at first glance, but is a game one and deserves a top ranking in my book. Carvola and Parade Girl for the place and show.

Seventh race—Miss Twinkle gets my call here. Has some closing ability. Jack Patches probably needed that last and is the one to beat. Sumac, tipped often, has a fighting chance.

Eighth race—Taunton should have no trouble in this company. Tuleyries Wand may draw his favorite rider in Palumbo and could upset the top one. Okay Winchell is improving and could jolt the company with a money appearance.

Best bet—Letter Box.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POMPOON, $6.80; $4.70, $3.70; SONNY JOE, $3.40, $2.50; BANJORINE, $4.30.

POMPOON, away quickly and showing good speed, shook off determined opposition from SONNY JOE in the first half mile, rallied gamely when shaken up midway of the homestretch and moved away steadily nearing the finish. SONNY JOE, displaying good speed to enter into contention early, made repeated bids in the first half mile, but weakened under punishment in the last furlong. BANJORINE held a forward position from the beginning, but could not threaten the first two. EXHORT went evenly all the way. GOLDEN ERA could not better his position at any stage. ZEBAR was placed on the outside for the start. He showed good speed while racing wide all the way. ZOR lacked speed. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Patapsco Steeplechase for 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:53. Winner, T. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SANTI QUARANTI, $7.60, $4.50, $3.90; STIR, $6.80, $5.60; VAUXTOL $23.00.

SANTI QUARANTI, taken under steadying restraint until reaching the backfield, went into an easy lead at the sixth fence, was steadied to all of his fences thereafter and was never in danger to win easily. STIR, reserved the first mile, improved his position steadily when put to a drive and came courageously in the late stages. VAUXTOI moved into contention for the last turn of the field and finished with good courage. POPPYMAN, a strong factor for the first mile and one-half, weakened thereafter. AXACAN gained steadily while losing ground, but could not threaten. McKINLEY B. raced nicely for the first mile, then tired. PURPLE DUST was never a factor. HOTMAN was never a forward contender. DEPART was very rank and circled his field wide after the start. MACROOME was pulled up coming to the last jump and OCCOQUAN lost his rider at the ninth fence.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Sagamore. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:26½. Winner, Bomar Stable's dk. b. or br. g. (4), by Jean Valjean—Under the Rose. Trained by R. E. Potts. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:46 3-5, 1:11 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BILLY BEE, $19.50, $6.20, $5.80; TRUMPERY, $6.80, $7.30; TWICE, $14.00.

BILLY BEE, in the thick of contention in the early racing, swung to the outside when engaging the leaders, came strongly under punishment in the last furlong after disposing of TRUMPERY and drew out steadily at the end. TRUMPERY showed good speed while setting the pace, raced kindly, but could not withstand the winner when caught. TWICE bestered his position steadily on the outside and finished determinedly in the last furlong. GALMICA, in tight quarters midway of the backstretch, found racing room in the last five-sixteenths and finished courageously. HOME LOAN had nice speed for a half mile, then weakened gradually. TOOLBOX could not reach a forward position. NIGHT SPRITE went well placed, but failed to rally when the real test came. FOLLOW ON was never a factor.

FOURTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:54. Off at 4:00½. Winner, Bomar Stable's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD BAND, $3.40, $2.50, $2.10; SOMALI, $3.40, $2.60; BALKO'S MAID, $2.50.

GOLD BAND had good speed to go to the front at once, drew out without difficulty, saved ground throughout and was never in danger. SOMALI, slow to find his best speed, gradually worked his way around, secured his position on the outside and closed stoutly, but was no match for the winner. BALKO'S MAID forced the early pace, but weakened at the end. HAPPY ROAD, fractious at the post, raced evenly, but was tiring. CLARION CALL had no excuses. FRASCATI flashed some early speed, but could not keep up. UNLIMITED was outrun and went very wide on the turn.

SEC to Expand Control Work, Landis Says

Development Only in Its Beginning, Chairman Tells Club.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 29.—James M. Landis, chairman of the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission, speaking tonight before the Economic Club, summed up its labors of the past two years as representing "only the beginnings of development in the technique of securities regulation."

Recalling the fears which, he said, businessmen had displayed toward the initiation of the commission, he added that "fortunately a co-operative spirit, together with toleration of our mistakes" soon superseded them with the result that major outlines of the structure intended to protect American investors were now apparent. "But," he continued, "the Securities and Exchange Commission faces not the task of gentle polishing and refining but the stern work of continued building."

Listing purposes of the commission and the extent to which they have and can be realized, Landis said three major principles were to govern: Controlling credit to prevent undue speculation; insuring the specific information necessary to make intelligent investment possible; banishment of fraudulent and questionable practices from the securities business.

Margin Action.

To curb undue speculation, the speaker said, the Federal Reserve Board was granted authority to set up limits for margin requirements. Referring to the action of the Federal Reserve System in providing 55 per cent of market value ratio for margin purchases, he said it produced "no noticeably serious marketwise effect or serious objection.

"Marked improvement is to be seen in the quality of annual reports to stockholders," he said. One need yet, he added, was a provision for current quarterly reports from corporations.

He said there had been too little experience yet to determine whether the flow of new capital into industry was, as a result of disclosure requirements, reaching new and less wasteful directions.

He completed what he termed a broad picture of the commission's activities by a recital of methods it had used to prevent frauds and manipulations and said he expected a decision from the Supreme Court at its next term on the controverted public utility holding company law.

Receiver to Sell Gen. Theater's Assets

Wilmington, Del., April 29 (AP).—Chancellor Josia Wolcott authorized United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings today, as receiver for General Theaters Equipment, Inc., to sell all assets of the receivership estate.

Wolcott fixed May 18 as the date of the sale, involving assets currently listed at $3,687,938. They consist largely of stocks in various motion-picture corporations.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Decline Further With Telephone, Steel and General Motors Breaking.

New York, April 29.—Stocks continued to decline in less active trading. Selling was milder than recently through the first four hours, but no effort was made to rally, and late in the final hour a selling drive took place that sent the ticker tape behind and cut away more fractions and points from prices before it was stopped. Turnover in stocks was around 1,800,000 shares. Bonds were lower. September wheat closed 1⅛ cents down at 84½ cents a bushel.

Failure of the stock market to rally yesterday afternoon when given the opportunity created no false hopes of an advance today. The renewed weakness came thereafter as no surprise, but it was none the less painful and generated a good deal of pessimism over the outlook for the next several months. No decided setback in stocks, even in a bull market, can come without having some influence on business sentiment. Plans for expansion necessarily will be reviewed in many instances on the idea that the stock market is forecasting a check to business recovery, and such a check is unlikely except as a result of a highly unfavorable political situation.

Unless the political factor does indeed give the country a bad jolt, the current fall in stock prices is not in itself an alarming portent. The market had risen for virtually a year without a setback, and that is something few bull markets ever do. It is impossible for prices to be kept in exactly the correct relationship with earnings and dividends, and the market always rushes ahead too fast or lags too far behind. Probably before many weeks many will again be eager to buy stocks at prices higher than those today, but nothing is so rare as courage in a bear market.

Telephone Breaks.

The selling of stocks was more concentrated than it has been in recent trading. Without the heavy fall of American Telephone, which was down 7½ points at the worst, the weakness in Steel and the sharp losses in miscellaneous issues, mostly preferreds, that usually have few traders, the market would not have looked particularly bad. A goodly number of stocks improved by fractions and a few issues rose 1 to 2 points, American Can being among them.

Losses taken were sufficient to put the average price of stocks down to a new low level. Railroad shares were rather neglected, but sales that were made resulted in declines of 1 to 3 points. Public utilities were unsettled by the hurried retreat of American Telephone. Motor shares were unpopular most of the time. Chrysler had to take a bit of a beating in the morning and General Motors had its selling turn in the last hour. Silver shares were firm.

Anomaly.

Midweek business news was more favorable than otherwise, though the heavy market spoiled its taste. Thanks to the early Eastern, retail shopping turns out to have increased sharply, according to the Federal Reserve Bank. Electrical output rose again and railroad freight carloadings held their rising trend, the rise over a year ago being fully 18 per cent. The gain last week over the previous week was more than 2 per cent. Steel trade journals told of an unexpected increase in miscellaneous steel buying, although prices for scrap are softening.

However, a decided offset to any such news was the passage by the House of the new tax bill and the reported melting of opposition to the measure in the Senate. Everyone is now familiar enough with the measure to see its intrinsic viciousness as regards continued business prosperity, and its plain intent, namely to sugar the pill of unrestrained waste of public money, which threatens disaster in the end.

Call Money.

Much talk was heard in the banks today on the possibility of getting 1 or 1½ per cent in near future, by gentlemen's agreement or otherwise, on what will be known after May 1 as frozen brokers' loans. Some of the banks are taking this attitude. Old loans are valuable to brokers, brokers cannot well afford to pay them off; therefore we should earn more on them. A few of the banks reported this morning that they had begun to do a land-office business with firms which desired to get as much capital as possible for future needs at present favorable terms. Tomorrow is the last day on which such accommodations may be had.

Declarations.

Banks provide dealers and brokers today with form letters which they are requested to sign when making any loans after May 1. The form letters recite that the money is sought to carry securities, that it is not sought to carry securities, or that it is required to carry securities which are exempt from lending restrictions. Brokers and dealers are requested to file these letters over the usual signatures when making new loans or when effecting substitutions. If the customers wish a bank officer to sign these statements, there is space provided.

Swiss Francs.

Independent weakness in Swiss francs created some anxiety. Some reports gave Italian withdrawals of funds for purchase of goods through Switzerland as the explanation, but the German situation was believed to have a good deal to do with it. To some observers it looks as though the Hitler regime aims to get rid of Reichsbank President Schacht and to embark on an inflation policy, which would be detrimental to Switzerland's large investments and short-term engagements with Germany. Poland's recent troubles were due in no small measure to the tie-up of payments due from Germany. Switzerland, which has been threatened before in like fashion, may again have trouble with frozen German credits.

Presidential Elections Cut Business 4%

Averages Since Civil War Are Reported by Chicago Professor.

Chicago, April 29.—Business during Presidential election years since the Civil War has averaged 4 per cent worse than in other years, a study of Dr. William F. Ogburn, of the University of Chicago, showed today.

Dr. Ogburn sought to test, he said, "the popular notion that business is not as good in election years as in others." Adjusted indexes of business for the Presidential years were compared wtih average indexes of the other three years of the "Presidential period" to arrive at the results.

The sociologist pointed out the "4 per cent under" figure was true on the average only, and any election period might vary widely. "Take for example," Dr. Ogburn said, "the 1916 and 1920 elections. Business conditions were the best. Hence, it cannot be said that business this year will not be as good as it was in 1934 or 1935, nor as good as it may be in 1937.

"However, the chances are nine out of ten that during the next several Presidential elections business will suffer somewhat on the average." Commenting on stock prices and their comparison with general business, Dr. Ogburn said:

"The general average of stock prices generally conforms with business except that its cycle precedes that of business."

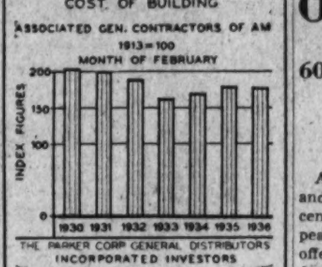
Construction Costs 12% Below 1930



Boston, Mass., April 29.—The height of building costs was in 1929 and 1930. In February of this year building costs of all types were 12 per cent below 1930, but 9 per cent higher than in February, 1933, when it cost less to build than in any February since 1917. When it costs more to rent than to build, people will build. House rents have gone up 10 per cent the past year.

On the Air Today

Statistical programs, of far higher fidelity than any now known to listeners, are promised by Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong, professor of electrical engineering, Columbia University, with the placing in operation this summer of a high-power, ultra-short wave experimental station. It will employ the frequency modulation static-reducing system recently demonstrated before the Institute of Radio Engineers.

According to the announcement, the transmitter's power corresponds to the peak power proposed for use in the television transmitter of NBC in the Empire State Building. It is equivalent to 40,000 watts. (By way of comparison, the power of WRC is 500 watts; WMAL, 250; WJSV, 10,000, and WOL, 100, night time.)

Maj. Armstrong's development, it must be understood, is in the short-wave bands, and his station will not be heard by owners of ordinary broadcast-receiving sets. But those with short-wave sets tuning down to 5 to 10 meters will be able to get the programs. Armstrong claims that the power range will be "several times greater than the range which stations of the present broadcasting systems reach, without interference."

The chief interest of the announcement to the ordinary listener is in the claim of a superior broadcasting apparatus—which obviously can reflect in improved receiving conditions in the future, if successful in experimentation.

This is the night for Bing Crosby, who has cherished that ambition to sing with one of the world's most famous symphony orchestras. Yes-sir, this is the night Leopold Stokowski conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra in a popular ballad and the crooning Crosby has his moment. The title of the number has never been announced—but it will be a little out of the usual run of the orchestra's repertoire, no doubt. The orchestra will play a symphonic composition or two; then Crosby rushes from one studio to the one adjoining, where the 100 men of Stokowski's organization fill it to capacity. Crosby sings, and then hurries back to where Paima and his New Orleans Five will be presented—and also Una Merkel, of the cinema, WRC, at 9.

Graham McNamee, veteran N. B. C. announcer, has been assigned to the national political conventions for his network. He will be aided by Dorothy Thompson, noted woman author, as commentator, and Walter Lippman, William Hard and others.

'Master Minds' in Kidnap Case Said to Intend Killing Harry Weiss.

By the United Press.

New York, April 29.—A man who knows too much about the kidnaping of Paul H. Wendel was given sanctuary in jail today lest he be killed by some of the "master minds" who are said to have decided to quiet the whole affair with bullets.

He is Harry Weiss, a thick-necked taxicab driver, who surrendered in Ohio yesterday, and came back to New York today to confess, according to District Attorney William F. Geoghan his part in Wendel's captivity and torture.

It was not Weiss' idea that he should go to jail for his own good, but he appeared to be relieved when County Judge George W. Martin made the decision for him. The judge fixed bail at $50,000—a stiff sum for a taxicab driver.

Blames Ellis Parker, Jr.

"Maybe Weiss had better be kept in jail," the judge said, after the arraignment. "You know, for the purpose of self-preservation."

Before Weiss went to jail, however, he made a confession, according to Geoghan, and that confession blackened Ellis Parker, jr., with chief responsibility for the kidnaping of Wendel and the three-day delay in the electrocution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the murder of the Lindbergh baby. Parker, son of the chief detective of Burlington County, is still a fugitive from justice.

Geoghan said Weiss' confession implicated "a South Amboy mob and people high in political circles" in the Wendel affair. The district attorney communicated enough of his information to Weiss' wife to send her hurrying to him to arrange for her husband's surrender before he "came back in a box," as Geoghan put it.

Relates Confession.

Weiss' confession, as announced by Geoghan, pictured the Wendel kidnaping as a combination of comic-strip detective work and medieval brutality. Parker, according to Weiss, conceived the crime and equipped himself with a false mustache and dark glasses. All Weiss got out of it, he said, was $40 expense money, a toy pistol and a promise that after it was all over he would be appointed to the New Jersey State police force.

Geoghan said the substance of the Weiss confession was as follows:

Parker arranged with Weiss, Murray Bleefeld, Harry Bleefeld and Martin Schlossman to help him kidnap Wendel, a disbarred lawyer who had been put under mental observation several times.

Parker "deputized" his accomplices, giving them the impression they were New Jersey law enforcement officers, although Parker never was more than an employe in the motor fuel tax division in Trenton.

On the night of February 14, the five men kidnaped Wendel in front of a New York hotel and took him to the home of Murray Bleefeld in the Sheepshead Bay section. There they asked him to confess that he had murdered the Lindbergh baby—a crime for which New Jersey was trying to electrocute Hauptmann over the vigorous protest of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman. Wendel refused.

Parker directed that Wendel should be taken down in the basement and "spread eagled." That meant he was tied by his arms and legs with ropes and the ropes were pulled tight until they strained and twisted Wendel's joints. They put lighted matches against his legs and kicked him. Wendel signed the confession.

Young Parker called up "some people in New Jersey and read the confession over the telephone. Then he came back and said it wouldn't do—that it would have to be changed in several places. Wendel was tortured into agreeing to the suggested changes.

Six of the ten days that Wendel was held in the house were spent in getting the "confession" to suit Parker. Then Wendel was taken to New Jersey and placed in the New Lisbon Home for the Feeble-Minded. Ellis Parker, sr., apparently assumed custody of him around February 24.

Hauptmann was to have died the night of March 31. On March 28 Attorney General David T. Wilentz, of New Jersey, ordered the elder Parker to deliver Wendel to Mercer County authorities in Trenton. Parker did so and Wendel told his story of being tortured. Then he repudiated his "confession."

Geoghan said tonight Wendel's story checked with Weiss' in every detail.

New York police cracked down on bridge players yesterday. Mildred Lovejoy and Mrs. Adelaide Neuwirth, well known tournament bridge players, shown being arraigned in court on gambling charges following raid on their bridge club.

N. Y. Bridge Tourney Sponsors Arrested on Gambling Charge

Two Women Teachers, Seized in Studio Apartment Raid, Paroled to Face Trial; Devotees of Game Fear Police Drive on Clubs.

New York, April 29 (AP).—In a courtroom crowded with anxious bridge enthusiasts, two prominent women players were arraigned today on a charge of violating the gambling laws in connection with the operation of a duplicate bridge tournament.

The anxiety of the spectators was traced to a fear that the police department might be contemplating a wide-scale offensive against the numerous bridge clubs in the city.

Discussing yesterday's raid on a midtown studio, which led to today's court hearing, Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine said:

"That was nothing more than a gambling house. You can gamble with bridge just as you can with poker, black jack or fan tan. Any club that violates the law is subject to police action."

The two women taken in the raid are Miss Mildred Lovejoy, 34, who lives in the studio apartment with her mother, and Mrs. Adelaide Neuwirt, 35. Both have a following as bridge teachers and tournament players.

After pleading not guilty they were paroled for trial in Special Sessions by Magistrate Anthony F. Burke.

A few hours after the bridge club raid, members of the police gambling squad visited a charity ball in a midtown hotel and a poker game in an uptown penthouse. Nine men were arrested at the charity ball, and ten women and six men at the penthouse. All but one woman were discharged in the latter case.

Policeman Dennis V. Claire testified 20 men and women were playing duplicate bridge in the Lovejoy studio when he arrived.

"I told those present that I was a police officer and asked them what they were playing," he said. "They said it was duplicate contract bridge. I asked them what the stakes were and was informed that they paid $1 entrance fee and received as a prize for the best score one-half of the afternoon's receipts. Yesterday there were 20 guests there and the prize was $10. Miss Lovejoy told me that she and her partner divided the remainder."

Reaguer Case May Go to Jury This Afternoon

Final Arguments Begun in Trial for Bride's Slaying; State Asks Death.

Hunched dejectedly behind his attorneys, William H. Reaguer, 51-year-old Culpeper, Va., mortician, on trial for the penknife murder of Willie Mae Wood, first heard himself described as a cold-blooded killer, then as a helpless madman, as lawyers for the Government and the defense began their final arguments to the jury in Justice Oscar Luhring's Criminal Court yesterday.

Assistant U. S. Attorneys Cecil Heflin and Irvin Goldstein addressed the all-male venire as soon as court convened yesterday afternoon, and they were followed by Associate Defense Counsel Burnette Miller.

Arguments to Close.

Today Chief Defense Attorney James A. O'Shea will close arguments in behalf of Reaguer, who is charged with having almost decapitated Mrs. Wood, a bride of 17 days, in his room at the Houston Hotel before dawn last October 12.

Then Goldstein will argue in rebuttal for the Government.

The case is expected to go to the jury some time this afternoon, after Justice Luhring formally charges the veniremen.

As the middle-aged defendant listened fitfully yesterday, he heard himself portrayed as two men.

First Heflin, then Goldstein, characterized Reaguer as of sound mind. He was, Heflin stated, responsible for whatever indiscretions Willie Mae Wood may have committed with him in the years leading up to the death ride in the rain to Washington last autumn.

"Reaguer," Heflin said, "was an important man in the community. He was a business man—a shrewd business man. He went down the road and he met Willie Mae Wood when she was but 16.

Claims Defendant Normal.

"He killed her because he was jealous of her. He killed her because she went away from him and married Herbert Wood."

Goldstein attacked the insanity plea of the defense vigorously. He dwelt at length upon the testimony of alienists and physicians who said the defendant suffered from arterio-sclerosis.

"What is arterio-sclerosis?" asked Goldstein, his voice rising dramatically as he leaned against a table.

"It is simply hardening of the arteries. Even the physicians you have heard testify have all said it is common in persons 50 years or over. It is in no way a form of insanity. It was normal in a man of Reaguer's years."

The condition which the defendant had was merely normal, the product of his age, Goldstein contended.

He assailed the testimonies of Dr. Antoine Schneider and Dr. J. S. De Jarnette, two star alienist witnesses for the defense.

He dwelt on the testimony of the Government's principal alienist in prosecuting Reaguer, Dr. Percy Hickling.

"Reaguer was a shrewd businessman, and he was shrewd when he was examined by Dr. Hickling," thundered Goldstein.

"There was evidence that he faked insanity—that he malingered, and even the defense alienists admitted that he malingered. When he asked Dr. Hickling to call Mr. O'Shea, his attorney, at the time of the last examination, and offered him a nickel to do this, was that the act of an insane man?"

Unimpressed by Witnesses.

As for the character witnesses the defense had brought to the stand, the citizens of Culpeper, who testified they had noticed morbid, deleterious changes in Reaguer following the blood clot he suffered in the spring of 1932, Goldstein was unimpressed.

In concluding Goldstein, who became hoarse in the course of his argument, asked the jury to send the broad-shouldered undertaker to the electric chair.

Burnette, opening for the defense, presented the second Reaguer to the court—a broken, sick and insane businessman, a hard-working father who had given his children the best, a man with headaches and heartaches, who was of unsound mind when he slashed Willie Mae to death.

He sketched again the life history of the mortician, who listened more carefully as his attorney spoke.

Reaguer, for Burnette's purposes, became "Will Reaguer," the man who always would do favors for his friends.

Insane, Says Attorney.

"Will Reaguer was insane, and he is insane," said Burnette.

"You have heard the testimony of his doctors—and particularly of his family physician, Dr. Granville Eastham. Dr. Eastham should know, more than any of the alienists, how sick Reaguer was."

The evening of October 11, before the wild ride of Willie Mae, Reaguer and Willie Mae's pretty cousin, Annie O'Bannon, began, Reaguer talked to Eastham, Burnette recalled.

"Dr. Eastham gave him a small quantity of drug to quiet his jangled nerves after Reaguer had read to him letters from Willie Mae—who asked for money and said she wanted to be with him.

"The drug on top of the whisky was like nitroglycerin on top of a bomb."

Asserting that he must "tread carefully upon the ashes of the dead," Burnette reviewed the affair Reaguer had with Willie Mae. He attacked the testimony of Miss O'Bannon.

"She had every opportunity to summon aid on the trip to Washington if Reaguer was threatening Willie Mae and her," said Burnette.

Noisy Mocking Birds Routed by Policemen

Petersburg, Va., April 29 (AP).—Nocturnal warbling of a mocking bird and his mate gave certain Wanut Hill residents and the Petersburg police department trouble early this morning.

The problem was solved, at least for the present, when a policeman, armed with a long pole, routed the leather-lunged songbirds.

Three officers, answering a call about 1:30 a. m., found the two birds were crooning at full volume.

After coaxing and other methods had failed to halt the noisy warblers, a pole turned the trick. The birds sought another roosting place.

Troopers Rout Mob With Gas; Avert Lynching

Guardsmen Protect Negro at Hearing in Death of Alabama Girl.

By the Associated Press.

Huntsville, Ala., April 29.—A menacing, hooting crowd was dispersed with tear gas by harassed National Guardsmen today at a preliminary hearing for Walter Miller, young Negro charged with the murder of Vivian Woodward, 19-year-old white girl.

A dozen gas bombs were exploded, scattering the jeering throng which surrounded the courthouse after the Negro was escorted here from Birmingham by the militia for the surprise arraignment.

Two persons were placed in temporary custody until the troops sped away with the prisoner at the conclusion of the court proceedings.

The trembling Miller, ringed by the guardsmen carrying machine guns, rifles and gas projectors, entered a plea of innocence to the charge of assaulting and killing Miss Woodward the night of March 28. Trial was set for May 11.

After the brief hearing he was placed in a truck and returned to Birmingham, where he will be held for safekeeping pending trial. His escort included 112 guardsmen, traveling in a caravan of ten motor trucks.

It was as the group left the courthouse that the gas was used to clear the courthouse area of the noisy demonstrators.

Miller, caught in Terre Haute, Ind., was said by authorities to have made a full, signed confession in the Jefferson County Jail at Birmingham several weeks ago. It was given in the presence of a score of officers and newspapermen.

Troops were called here March 29 to protect four Negroes after they had been rescued from a mob by officers. The Negroes were caught in a cabin after bloodhounds followed a trail from the scene of the Woodward crime almost to their door.

They were taken to Birmingham for safe keeping and released after the grand jury returned indictments against Miller.

Mob Lynches Negro Accused in Attack.

Lepanto, Ark., April 29.—A 19-year-old Negro, accused of an attempted attack on a white woman here April 18, was taken from the city marshal today by a masked mob and shot to death. The Negro, Willie Kees, was found at the edge of town with three bullet wounds in his body.

Deputy Sheriff Mert Walker said Kees was accused of the attempted assault, whipped and ordered to leave town.

He returned Monday, however, and was arrested. On the way to jail the mob appeared.

May said they overpowered him, forced the Negro into an automobile and sped away.

Old House Yields Skeleton of Child

The skeleton of a 2-day-old child was found under the flooring of a dilapidated old house that was being razed yesterday at 3312 Wheeler road southeast.

Francis Wahler, who owns the property where the house is located, found the bones between the floor of the second floor lying on the rafters. Wahler said the house, more than 100 years old, had not been occupied for nine years.

Homicide Squad detectives and the District coroner viewed the bones last night. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, said it was impossible to tell the cause of death due to the decomposed state of the remains, which were taken to the District Morgue pending an investigation by police.

A few words about COLD AIR

Heat—damp, humid heat—is the summer enemy of your furs. It steals their brilliance, and robs pelts of their suppleness.

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks — and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. (Advt.)
